

LABOR DAY DEMONSTRATION SURPASSED EXPECTATIONS

The Great Holiday Celebrated in the Most Impressive Manner.

OVER 3,500 WERE IN LINE

And All the Organizations of the City and Vicinity Represented.

BIG PARADE PASSED OFF WELL

No Accident Occurred to Mar Enjoyment—Highly Creditable Displays And Handsome Uniforms Abounded—Crowds And Enthusiasm.

The Labor day demonstration surpassed all expectations and was by far the most successful celebration of the great holiday that this city has ever seen.

As early as 4:30 Monday morning the working people began the preparation for the celebration, and from that time until very late last night the city was thronged with merry crowds of pleasure seekers.

Although the sky was overcast throughout most of the day, the attendance was not affected to any extent, and the crowds from out of town were unusually large.

By 6:30 hundreds of white capped men were arrayed in a dozen different suits of uniform thronged the Trades Council headquarters making ready for the start to Wellsville. The East Liverpool street railway had 10 extra cars on the Diamond long before 7 o'clock, and they were all filled and started on the journey west at a little after that hour. Not a single hitch occurred and the thousands who went from here were landed in the sister city in a remarkably short space of time.

East Liverpool people were not so fortunate on the return trip, and several of the cars were disabled. No serious damage was done, however, aside from the delay. The report was started in Wellsville soon after the march was completed that it had been decided to not start the East Liverpool parade until after dinner. This had the effect of causing the people to take more time than they otherwise would on the return trip, so that it was fully 11:30 before they all reached this city.

Chief Marshal McLane and his aides did their best to get the immense crowd in line quickly, but were handicapped to a great extent by a majority of the orders not being able to get back from Wellsville in time to render any material assistance in forming the procession. The work therefore rested with but a few, and considering that the procession was the largest by far that was ever formed in this city, a great deal of credit is due those in charge of the parade for moving it when they did.

The line of parade was changed somewhat from the way it appeared in the printed program, as Marshal McLane by so doing was able to place the various organizations in their positions in a much shorter time. When the parade was ready to move at exactly 11:40 the line was in the following order:

- City Marshal and Police Force.
- Manley's Band.
- Chief Marshal and Aides.

GREAT THROGS SAW THE SPORTS

Competition Was Keen in the Athletic Events at Rock Springs.

A LIST OF THE WINNERS

The Picnic a Great Feature of a Great Day—Dancing Pavilion Well Patronized — Interesting Game of Base Ball Played.

About 7,000 people attended the picnic at Rock Springs in the afternoon, and though the rain, which lasted only a short time, inconvenienced some, the immense crowd remained in a good humor and the occasion was thoroughly enjoyed by every one. The dancing pavilion was well patronized, both afternoon and evening, and a substantial sum was netted by the committee.

The various sporting events were watched by interested crowds.

D. M. McLane, of the sports committee, failed to start at the appointed time owing to the rain, but everything in this department was pulled off before dark. The winners of the various contests are as follows:

Throwing baseball—First prize, J. A. McKeever; second, Joseph Bennett. Standing broad jump—First prize, Lou Fritz; second, W. B. Hill. Running broad jump—First prize, A. W. Welsh; second, J. A. McKeever. Fat man's race—First prize, William Smith; second, Charles Craft. Putting 16-pound shot—First prize, C. F. Armour; second W. B. Hill. Foot race, 220 yards—First prize, H. Foutts; second, William Cooley. Throwing 16-pound hammer—First prize, George Gaston; second, W. B. Hill.

Hop-step-and-jump—First prize, Geo. Gaston; second, J. A. McKeever. Foot race, 100 yard dash—First prize, George Gaston; second, William Cooley.

Kicking football—First prize, C. F. Armour; second, F. Moore.

Hurdle race, 220 yards—First prize, George Gaston; second, A. McKeever. Charles Meanor, Fred Headley and two other 13-year-old lads ran a shoe race which was greatly enjoyed by the crowd. The race and a pair of shoes were won by Meanor.

The base ball game between Sebring and the Eclipse was called shortly after 4 o'clock, and proved a disastrous battle for Sebring.

Ashbaugh was in the box for the Eclipse and pitched a masterly game, allowing his opponents but eight hits, shutting them out without a single tally. Woodard was in the box for the visitors, and while he pitched a fairly good game, his support was not what it should have been. The feature of the game was the all-round playing of the Eclipse, not an error being made on that side.

On two occasions, once in the fourth, inning and again in the seventh Sebring had the bases full, and it looked as though they were bound to score. On the first occasion Ashbaugh's steady work saved the day, and he retired the side with a strike out. In the seventh, with the bases full, J. Heckathorne caught a hot line drive and doubled his man at second, and the inning was over.

The Eclipse team has a remarkable record so far this season. In the three games played but a single run has been made and that was scored by Lisbon several weeks ago. The other two games were with Dennison and Sebring, and neither was able to score. Ashbaugh officiated at all three games and his work was particularly clever.

Following is the score by innings of yesterday's game:

Sebring . . . 0 0 0 0 0 0 0 0—0 8 3
Eclipse . . . 0 1 0 0 0 2 0 4—7 13 0

FEW ARRESTS ON LABOR DAY

Though Crowds Were Big, They Were Remarkably Well Behaved.

NO SERIOUS DISORDER

Police Vigilance Unremitting And the Day a Hard One for the Officers. A Few Trivial Fights—Three Arrests Only.

The members of the East Liverpool police force never had a more difficult task to perform than the handling of the big crowds yesterday. All day long and until past midnight the officers were on constant duty, and though the force was greatly inadequate to properly patrol the city, no trouble of a serious nature resulted.

Chief Thompson instructed the police to be as lenient with the celebrators as possible, and while the saloons were well patronized the "drunks" were kept out of sight and away from trouble. The out-of-town people especially appreciated the kindness of the officers and many comments were heard as to the conduct of the force.

Several trivial fights were started during the day, but were stopped before reaching a serious stage. Mayor Davidson said this morning that he never saw a better behaved crowd than yesterday. He and Chief Thompson were both congratulating themselves because of the good order and absence of trouble, and though three arrests were made during the entire day, they considered that the officers had established records for themselves.

Patrolman Woods made two of the arrests. Charles Foetterman, of the East End, was found in a helpless state of intoxication and locked up for safe keeping. This morning Mayor Davidson fined him $1 and costs. He was unable to pay the fine and was remanded to jail.

Charles Amos was found lying in a doorway on Broadway suffering from a powerful "jag." He was locked up and fined $1 and costs this morning. During the month of May Amos was fined $5.60 for intoxication and released on his promise to pay the amount. This he failed to do and he now owes the city $11.20. He will be held in jail until the entire amount is paid.

It was not the intention of Mayor Davidson to hold court yesterday, but as he was called to the city hall on other business, he concluded to see what the victims of Saturday night and Sunday could do for him in the way of finances. On opening the door to the corridor of the jail the mayor found that he had no keys to the cells. It was necessary for him to try the culprits in their iron cages.

Charles McGavern and Samuel Beckford, who were arrested Saturday night in the Sixth street cemetery, were fined $1 and costs, which they paid and secured their release later. Peter Patee was arrested Sunday night by Officer Morris on the charge of drunkenness. He was fined $1 and costs, but couldn't pay the amount and languishes in the cooler.

CRAVE CHARGES MADE

IN THE MILL COMPANY'S PETITION FOR INJUNCTION.

Violence And Intimidation Alleged to Have Been Used by Strikers.

From a Staff Correspondent.

Columbus, Sept. 3.—The American Tin Plate company's petition, filed in the United States court, asking that the strikers be enjoined from interfering with the company in the operation of its mill at Irondale, is of unusual length and contains many allegations. The company desires the injunction to strike directly at Good Hope lodge No. 27, of the Amalgamated Association of Steelworkers, with which the strikers are affiliated.

The petition is termed a bill in equity and states that when in full operation the mill employs 450 men, and that the company has $150,000 invested in the plant. It is charged that 110 men left the employ of the company on July 12, and that since then these men and officers of the lodge have resorted to violence and intimidation and have entered into a conspiracy against the company. A blanket injunction is asked, to apply to all members of the association, the membership being too large to admit of specific mention being made of the name of each member.

The company complains that Good Hope lodge is attempting to dictate whom it shall employ and asks that it be permitted to exercise, without restraint, the privilege accorded it under the federal laws of employing such persons as it pleases. The members of the lodge are described as being insolent and financially irresponsible, and it is stated that therefore the company has no adequate remedy for damages.

It is asserted that men seeking employment at the Irondale mill have been attacked by strikers, and that the latter have formed themselves into committees to visit the homes of those working in the mills and to intercept others coming to the town to take places at the plant. The petition also says that through fear many remain away from the mill who otherwise would report duty there.

The company states that it has refused to recognize the association and that none of its members are in its employ. A special from Cincinnati states that the company has made application there for an injunction and that a writ restraining the strikers from even congregating near the company's premises was allowed.

The executive committee of the United Mine Workers has been ordered to meet in this city on Wednesday to take further cognizance of the strike situation in Columbiana and Belmont counties. Robert Legg, of East Greenville, Stark county, and James McKee, of Salineville, Columbiana county, are members of the committee. The trouble in Belmont county is at the Empire coal mines, where the organization is being strongly antagonized. It is proposed to wage a stiff fight against the company and unionize, if possible, the miners. It is not known what move will be made in the Columbiana county strike. Everything has been at a standstill at the mines since the trouble began.

VIEWS OF MANAGER BANFIELD

Proposes to Tolerate No Interference. Men Will Be Given a Chance, But the Mill Will Be Started Soon, He Says.

Irondale, Sept. 3.—United States Marshal Harness, acting under instructions from the Southern district court of Ohio, has arrived in Irondale to begin serving general injunctions on the striking mill men here to restrain them from interfering with workmen in the employ of the American Tin Plate company.

The marshal arrived yesterday afternoon and was prepared to proceed to business at once, but the big Labor day celebration in Wellsville and East Liverpool had depopulated the town, and the marshal found no one upon whom to serve the papers. He held a conference with Manager Banfield, who was in town for the first time for almost a week, and it was decided not to begin operations until all of the men had returned to their homes.

The injunction is the result of a visit to Cincinnati last week of Manager Banfield and the attorney for the tin plate company, E. E. Erskine. They first made application in Columbus, but were there told that the Southern district was the proper one in which they should apply. The two hastened at once to Cincinnati and on Saturday Judge Clark, of the Southern district, granted the temporary restraining order. It was turned over to the marshal and he at once set about to make the service. Manager Banfield, in a talk yesterday, said:

"I hardly think the men at Irondale will make any further effort to hinder us in our work while we are backed up by the strong arm of the law. I know the men of this locality. I have worked with them and I guess they understand that I have a pretty warm feeling for them. Nevertheless, if they will not voluntarily return to work we will have to get ready to start with imported men. We would rather not do that, but the men leave us no alternative. Within a few days we expect to start up our plant. In the event of interference the law will be vigorously enforced. I still believe that nine-tenths of the men in Irondale would go back to work under the old conditions if it were not for agitators among them.

"The outlook for the tin trade this year is certainly poor. I do not see at this time how a large amount of trade can help but be lost. Our three important months are September, October and November. Most of our orders are placed during that period. Even if the mills were to start instantly the loss would be incalculable. With poor prospects of a general resumption, however, the output will scarcely be able to meet the demand. The orders which would naturally come to us will, as a result, go to Europe—Wales in particular."

LONG LIST OF MEN AGAINST WHOM IT IS MADE.

Good Will Lodge And Numerous Others Cited to Court.

Irondale, Sept. 3.—(Special)—The papers which are being served by Deputy U. S. Marshal Harness here cite the following persons to appear before the U. S. circuit in Columbus November 4, to answer to a bill filed against them by the American Tin Plate company:

Good Hope lodge No. 27, of the Amalgamated Association of Iron, Steel & Tin Plate Workers; Richard Caddick, president of said lodge; Fletcher Higgins, secretary of said lodge; Garrett Jackson, treasurer of said lodge; Richard Caddick, Fletcher Higgins, Garrett Jackson, Homer McLane, John Wilson, Charles McLane,

offer of the committee to award a flag to the organization having the best showing in three propositions, viz: The largest percentage of membership in line, the best appearance of those connected with the union and the best and most complete display of trade of the competitor.

No less than a dozen organizations made a bid for the prize, and in a majority of cases the effort was a credit to them.

It was readily seen by the leaders of the larger unions that it would be a difficult matter to win out on the clause with reference to the percentage of membership in line. For instance the kilnmen, whose membership numbers over 400, had a very large representation, but lacked many men to secure 100 per cent in the matter of their turnout. The smaller unions had the advantage in this, and in many cases 100 per cent could be claimed.

The saggermakers were well up in the list of competitors, and although they had not a display of their trade, they were strong in the other two requirements. This union was fitted out in a full canvas suit, and their appearance attracted a great deal of attention.

The bricklayers, for the first time since Labor day has been celebrated in East Liverpool, were represented in the procession by their entire membership. The members wore white overalls and a blue shirt, and made a splendid appearance.

The hod carriers were also out for the prize, having provided themselves with a full uniform.

The Sebring Brotherhood people made a strong fight for the prize, and will certainly be a factor when a decision is reached. Every Sebring workman was fitted out in a blue cloth cap of the design adopted by the committee, and carried a fancy umbrella. The outfit was very attractive, and owing to the large number who attended from that town, they attracted a great deal of attention along the route of parade.

The plumbers were the envy of every one. The members of this little organization make up in energy and pluck what they lack in numbers. Fresh from scars and bruises of their recent battle with the master plumbers, the union entered the competition for the prize, and if the general sentiment all along the line can be taken in evidence, they should have the honors.

Every member was in line and fully uniformed in blue overalls, black shirt and white cap. They had engaged a huge float, and upon this a fully equipped plumbing shop was fitted up. A half dozen journeymen plumbers were busily engaged fitting up a bath tub, chandelier and other apparatus, while the remainder of the members walked behind. "Snailor" Bevington, one of the members, acted as drum major and swung the baton in the regulation style.

A number of the other organizations made creditable displays, among them being the retail clerks, painters and decorators, carpenters, stonemasons and brewery workers.

A number of the business firms had displays, and in several instances they were very fine.

The route of parade was as follows:

Formed on Broadway, right resting on Fifth, East Market to Diamond, Diamond to Monroe, to Fourth, to Market, to Second, to Broadway, to Fifth, to Market, to West Market, to Sheridan avenue, countermarched to Diamond, where parade disbanded.

It was almost 1 o'clock when the parade was finished, and then began a grand rush for the Southside cars.

WHITE CAP NOTICES

SENT TO CITIZENS IN THE VICINITY OF HIGHLANDTOWN.

Notes of Warning Follow the Mailed Destruction of Property.

The quiet neighborhood of Highlandtown has a sensation and a mystery. For some weeks the families of John H. McPherson and John Clager, highly respected people, whose farms adjoin each other, have been the victims of somebody's spite and malice. Their fences have been torn down and the rails scattered along the road. Their fruit trees and hen houses have been robbed. Their growing crops have been despoiled, and not long since a valuable dog belonging to Mr. McPherson was sent to his happy hunting ground by the poison route.

Not only have these things been done at various times, but in addition both Mr. McPherson and Mr. Clager have been receiving letters of the most threatening kind, warning them to vacate their claims, fly the country or suffer consequences the most dire and terrible.

A few mornings ago Mr. Clager went out to the field to hitch his team to his plow. He was greatly chagrined upon going to the plow to find the plow entirely dismantled and many of its integral parts hid from sight. On the beam of the plow was attached a letter warning Mr. Clager "to flee from the wrath to come."

Suspicion points strongly to some parties residing not far away, but in the absence of definite proofs no arrests have yet been made.

SORROW FOR HIS CRIME

Expressed By William H. Leasure Prior to His Death on Sunday.

Pittsburg, Sept. 3.—William H. Leasure, of Alliance and East Liverpool, who died Sunday after shooting his wife and himself on Saturday, before he died, expressed great sorrow for what he had done, and continually asked as to the condition of his wife. He prayed that she would live and that he would also recover.

The wife, Mrs. Ella Leasure, who was shot in the left forearm and right breast, is suffering some little pain, but her injuries are not serious. The wound in the breast is a superficial one, the ball passing through the fleshy portion of the breast and curving around under the arm. She will likely be able to leave the hospital within the next week or 10 days. Mrs. Leasure was not told of her husband's death, as it was feared the knowledge would have an injurious effect upon her and delay her recovery.

HON. TOM L. JOHNSON.

His Erratic Ideas Upon State Taxation.

WANTS LAND TO BEAR ALL.

And the Bondholder and the Money Lender to Go Free—How Do Ohio Farmers Like the Tom Johnson Plan to Increase Their Taxes?

Who is Tom Johnson? What is his record? What are his claims to public consideration? Is he a reformer—or a fool?

These are questions which have—through the march of events, and the strange migrations of the Democratic party—or of a part or parcel thereof, been recently thrust upon the minds of the people of the state of Ohio.

Tom Johnson, like any other ambitious and aspiring citizen of this country, must be rated for just what he is worth—mentally, physically, or financially. He must be weighed in the balance, must be measured by the standard of merit and justice, and the results proclaimed to the people. In the first place, Mr. Johnson is a theorist, a disciple—by conviction or for policy reasons, it matters not, of that chief of American theorists—erratic, but honest,—the late Henry George.

Johnson, like his teacher, believes, or professes to believe, that lands should bear the chief burden of taxation, and that, irrespective of improvements, should all be taxed by a uniform scale; that the lands of the farmer in the back country should be taxed on the same basis as the lands of the wealthy owner of a valuable city tract, greatly enhanced in value through "unearned increment," or, through no effort of the owner, or of his assignors. This is a new and certainly novel theory, worthy, like any other theory, of such consideration as it may deserve, but scarcely for immediate adoption in actual practice. Certainly its adoption would prove highly demoralizing to vested interests in the state, and to people who have invested their capital in the state in reliance on a different order of things. Consequently, the adoption of the theories of Henry George, as expounded by Tom Johnson, respecting the mode of taxation of real and personal property in this state, is a very serious matter, and demands the most serious consideration at the hands of the voters. In the present state of economic thought, and the actual condition of the property interests of this state, such a change cannot be adopted with safety or ordinary business prudence; for such a change would be too radical, and work serious consequences to the state.

What is there in the record of Tom Johnson that commends him to the serious consideration of the voters of Ohio? Is he an eminent man, a statesman, a man noted for piety, good works, or zeal in the public interests? What has he accomplished for the public good—more or less than for his individual interests? Is the state, or Tom Johnson, better for his having lived, financially, politically, or morally? Upon the answer to these questions, the people must determine the issues raised by Johnson. Upon his record as prophet, sage, statesman, or philanthropist, they must decide whether he is fit to be entrusted with the direct control of the state affairs.

To what party does Tom Johnson belong? It would be difficult to say. The party he dominates has repudiated the free silver portion of the Democratic platform, and loves not the party of the gold standard. What, then, is the status of the party which Johnson dominates? What is its record? Is it fit to be trusted with an important mission, the reform of the tax laws of the state, or to be shunned as a "rump" of the defunct, free silver repudiation wing of the Democratic party? Let the people ponder, and decide this graye question.

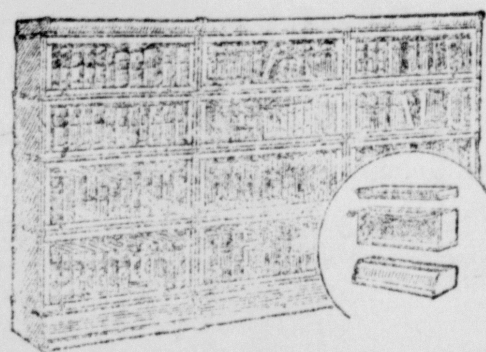

When a man turns "reformer," in this country, the people are pretty apt to suspect him of an inordinate greed for office. That is just what the people think of Tom Johnson. They feel, in fact, they know—that he is more eager to serve his own interests; that he is more eager to sit in the senate of the United States, than he is to serve the people of the state. That is just the reason he is turned reformer. But unless he can show just grounds for the radical reforms he purposes to effect, unless he can show some good and worthy motive in the matter, unless he can show, by his previous acts, that he has, as a statesman or leader, effected salutary reforms in the administration of the public affairs of the state, the people will be very apt to class him at his true rating, not a reformer, but a faddist.

By a strange coincidence, both Carrie Nation, the saloon smasher, and Tom Johnson, the corporation demolisher, are both in Cleveland. The joint operations of these two modern reformers may be expected to lower the level of Lake Erie.

The farmers of Ohio who have got safely out from under the debris of the terrible cyclone caused by the Democratic free trade regime are not supposed to be in favor of Tom Johnson's scheme to place a large share of taxes upon real estate.

Foraker and Hanna make an excellent senatorial team. Neither can be spared without impairing the efficiency of the Ohio representation in congress.

ENGLISH OF THE ENGLISH.

"London Is a Nice Place If You Know the Language."

That hackneyed American maiden who said London was a nice place if you knew the language was not a bit absurd. We speak English, but we have built up our forms of English expression upon the English of a few shires of the old country as it was spoken between two and three centuries ago, while they have been blending and changing the speech of all their home peoples during the same period. The result is that an American can hardly utter a sentence in England without calling attention to the difference between his speech and that of the people about him.

Only yesterday, after 18 months' residence in England, I rushed up to a conductor in Charing Cross station and asked, "Which car for Bromley?" He stared at me, and I knew I had spoken a foreign tongue to him, because street vehicles like omnibuses and horse cars are called road cars and tram cars, and there are no other cars in England.

If you ask a guest at your home in England whether he likes his meat rare, he asks what you said because he does not understand you. He calls meat underdone when it is not thoroughly cooked. If you tell him you fear the asparagus is canned, he is at a loss again, because he would have said it was tinned. To ask him to pass the powdered sugar will again set him to wondering, for he calls it icing sugar generally, though he knows that it is sometimes called caster or sifted sugar. And if you have candy on the table you may not call it so without betraying your foreign origin, for he calls candy "sweets," abbreviated from "sweetmeats," and used to designate all preserves, puddings, pies, candies and jams.

To go further along the eccentricities of English at the dining table most persons know, I suppose, that the beet is called beet root, cornstarch is corn flour, corned beef (or a particular cut of it) is called "silver sides of beef" and napkins are serviettes.—Julian Ralph in Harper's Magazine.

THERMOMETER TUBES.

Process of Their Manufacture at Jena, in Germany.

A most interesting account is given in The Idle of the wonderful state aided industry at Jena where glass and lenses are made for scientists. The industry has been built up by Professor Abbe and Dr. Schott, and has throughout been conducted by scientists whose efforts have made Jena famous among scientific men the world over. One of the most picturesque features of the Jena glassworks is the great corridor where the thermometer tubes are blown and drawn, says a correspondent.

We saw this glass in process of manufacture. A boy workman caught a bit of molten glass from the furnace on the end of a blowpipe. It was hardly larger than a walnut, but by twirling and blowing and molding it grew to the size of an orange, with the shape of an orange. More glass was then added, and there was more rolling and blowing, and when the proper stage was reached the blowpipe was passed quickly to the brawny master workman.

He, in his turn, added glass, blowing from time to time with cheeks out-puffed until it seemed as though they must burst, and then rolling the great ball of glass on his iron kneading board until it looked like a huge yellow gourd. Faster and faster he worked, keeping the ball always symmetrical and yet white hot. At length he lifted the glowing mass quickly in the air, and a second workman attached the blowpipe in opposite directions, twirling the pipes and blowing lustily from time to time. From a thick, partly yellow globe the glass thinned out quickly as the men ran apart, until it became a dull red tube not larger than a man's little finger and nearly 300 feet long. Sometimes in drawing these tubes one of the blowers would not only run the length of the corridor, but far outside on the hill.

offer of the committee to award a flag to the organization having the best showing in three propositions, viz: The largest percentage of membership in line, the best appearance of those connected with the union and the best and most complete display of trade of the competitor.

No less than a dozen organizations made a bid for the prize, and in a majority of cases the effort was a credit to them.

It was readily seen by the leaders of the larger unions that it would be a difficult matter to win out on the clause with reference to the percentage of membership in line. For instance the kilnmen, whose membership numbers over 400, had a very large representation, but lacked many men to secure 100 per cent in the matter of their turnout. The smaller unions had the advantage in this, and in many cases 100 per cent could be claimed.

The saggermakers were well up in the list of competitors, and although they had not a display of their trade, they were strong in the other two requirements. This union was fitted out in a full canvas suit, and their appearance attracted a great deal of attention.

The bricklayers, for the first time since Labor day has been celebrated in East Liverpool, were represented in the procession by their entire membership. The members wore white overalls and a blue shirt, and made a splendid appearance.

The hod carriers were also out for the prize, having provided themselves with a full uniform.

The Sebring Brotherhood people made a strong fight for the prize, and will certainly be a factor when a decision is reached. Every Sebring workman was fitted out in a blue cloth cap of the design adopted by the committee, and carried a fancy umbrella. The outfit was very attractive, and owing to the large number who attended from that town, they attracted a great deal of attention along the route of parade.

The plumbers were the envy of every one. The members of this little organization make up in energy and pluck what they lack in numbers. Fresh from scars and bruises of their recent battle with the master plumbers, the union entered the competition for the prize, and if the general sentiment all along the line can be taken in evidence, they should have the honors.

Every member was in line and fully uniformed in blue overalls, black shirt and white cap. They had engaged a huge float, and upon this a fully equipped plumbing shop was fitted up. A half dozen journeymen plumbers were busily engaged fitting up a bath tub, chandelier and other apparatus, while the remainder of the members walked behind. "Snaller" Bevington, one of the members, acted as drum major and swung the baton in the regulation style.

A number of the other organizations made creditable displays, among them being the retail clerks, painters and decorators, carpenters, stonemasons and brewery workers.

A number of the business firms had displays, and in several instances they were very fine.

The route of parade was as follows:

Formed on Broadway, right resting on Fifth, East Market to Diamond, Diamond to Monroe, to Fourth, to Market, to Second, to Broadway, to Fifth, to Market, to West Market, to Sheridan avenue, countermarched to Diamond, where parade disbanded.

It was almost 1 o'clock when the parade was finished, and then began a grand rush for the Southside cars.

Sharon, Pa., Sept. 3.—Through the beneficence of Frank H. Buhl, former president of the Sharon Steel company, Sharon has an opportunity to obtain a public building costing between $150,000 and $200,000. A meeting of business men a communication from Mr. Buhl was read, in which he offered to give Sharon such a building providing the people contribute funds for its maintenance. The only restriction imposed is that it be non-sectarian and that the rooms should be open seven days in the week.

The proposed building will be three stories in height and constructed of stone and brick. It will contain a library capable of holding 25,000 volumes, an auditorium with a seating capacity of 10,000 people, bowling alleys, gymnasium, billiard and reading rooms. The building will be erected on an imposing site on East State street, which Mr. Buhl recently purchased.

WHITE CAP NOTICES

SENT TO CITIZENS IN THE VICINITY OF HIGHLANDTOWN.

Notes of Warning Follow the Mysterious Destruction of Property.

The quiet neighborhood of Highlandtown has a sensation and a mystery. For some weeks the families of John H. McPherson and John Clager, highly respected people, whose farms adjoin each other, have been the victims of somebody's spite and malice. Their fences have been torn down and the rails scattered along the road. Their fruit trees and hen houses have been robbed. Their growing crops have been despoiled, and not long since a valuable dog belonging to Mr. McPherson was sent to his happy hunting ground by the poison route.

Not only have these things been done at various times, but in addition both Mr. McPherson and Mr. Clager have been receiving letters of the most threatening kind, warning them to vacate their claims, fly the country or suffer consequences the most dire and terrible.

A few mornings ago Mr. Clager went out to the field to hitch his team to his plow. He was greatly chagrined upon going to the plow to find the plow entirely dismantled and many of its integral parts hid from sight. On the beam of the plow was attached a letter warning Mr. Clager "to flee from the wrath to come."

Suspicion points strongly to some parties residing not far away, but in the absence of definite proofs no arrests have yet been made.

SORROW FOR HIS CRIME

Expressed By William H. Leasure Prior to His Death on Sunday.

Pittsburg, Sept. 3.—William H. Leasure, of Alliance and East Liverpool, who died Sunday after shooting his wife and himself on Saturday, before he died, expressed great sorrow for what he had done, and continually asked as to the condition of his wife. He prayed that she would live and that he would also recover.

The wife, Mrs. Ella Leasure, who was shot in the left forearm and right breast, is suffering some little pain, but her injuries are not serious. The wound in the breast is a superficial one, the ball passing through the fleshy portion of the breast and curving around under the arm. She will likely be able to leave the hospital within the next week or 10 days. Mrs. Leasure was not told of her husband's death, as it was feared the knowledge would have an injurious effect upon her and delay her recovery.

HON. TOM L. JOHNSON.

His Erratic Ideas Upon State Taxation.

WANTS LAND TO BEAR ALL.

And the Bondholder and the Money Lender to Go Free—How Do Ohio Farmers Like the Tom Johnson Plan to Increase Their Taxes?

Who is Tom Johnson? What is his record? What are his claims to public consideration? Is he a reformer—or a fool?

These are questions which have—through the march of events, and the strange migrations of the Democratic party—or of a part or parcel thereof, been recently thrust upon the minds of the people of the state of Ohio.

Tom Johnson, like any other ambitious and aspiring citizen of this country, must be rated for just what he is worth—mentally, physically, or financially. He must be weighed in the balance, must be measured by the standard of merit and justice, and the results proclaimed to the people. In the first place, Mr. Johnson is a theorist, a disciple—by conviction or for policy reasons, it matters not, of that chief of American theorists—erratic, but honest—the late Henry George.

Johnson, like his teacher, believes, or professes to believe, that lands should bear the chief burden of taxation, and that, irrespective of improvements, should all be taxed by a uniform scale; that the lands of the farmer in the back country should be taxed on the same basis as the lands of the wealthy owner of a valuable city tract, greatly enhanced in value through "unearned increment," or, through no effort of the owner, or of his assignors. This is a new and certainly novel theory, worthy, like any other theory, of such consideration as it may deserve, but scarcely for immediate adoption in actual practice. Certainly its adoption would prove highly demoralizing to vested interests in the state, and to people who have invested their capital in the state in reliance on a different order of things. Consequently, the adoption of the theories of Henry George, as expounded by Tom Johnson, respecting the mode of taxation of real and personal property in this state, is a very serious matter, and demands the most serious consideration at the hands of the voters. In the present state of economic thought, and the actual condition of the property interests of this state, such a change cannot be adopted with safety or ordinary business prudence; for such a change would be too radical, and work serious consequences to the state.

What is there in the record of Tom Johnson that commends him to the serious consideration of the voters of Ohio? Is he an eminent man, a statesman, a man noted for piety, good works, or zeal in the public interests? What has he accomplished for the public good—more or less than for his individual interests? Is the state, or Tom Johnson, better for his having lived, financially, politically, or morally? Upon the answer to these questions, the people must determine the issues raised by Johnson. Upon his record as prophet, sage, statesman, or philanthropist, they must decide whether he is fit to be entrusted with the direct control of the state affairs.

To what party does Tom Johnson belong? It would be difficult to say. The party he dominates has repudiated the free silver portion of the Democratic platform, and loves not the party of the gold standard. What, then, is the status of the party which Johnson dominates? What is its record? Is it fit to be trusted with an important mission, the reform of the tax laws of the state, or to be shunned as a "rump" of the defunct, free silver repudiation wing of the Democratic party? Let the people ponder, and decide this gray question.

When a man turns "reformer," in this country, the people are pretty apt to suspect him of an inordinate greed for office. That is just what the people think of Tom Johnson. They feel, in fact, they know—that he is more eager to serve his own interests; that he is more eager to sit in the senate of the United States, than he is to serve the people of the state. That is just the reason he is turned reformer. But unless he can show just grounds for the radical reforms he purposes to effect, unless he can show some good and worthy motive in the matter, unless he can show, by his previous acts, that he has, as a statesman or leader, effected salutary reforms in the administration of the public affairs of the state, the people will be very apt to class him at his true rating, not a reformer, but a faddist.

By a strange coincidence, both Carrie Nation, the saloon snasher, and Tom Johnson, the corporation demolisher, are both in Cleveland. The joint operations of these two modern reformers may be expected to lower the level of Lake Erie.

The farmers of Ohio who have got safely out from under the debris of the terrible cyclone caused by the Democratic free trade regime are not supposed to be in favor of Tom Johnson's scheme to place a large share of taxes upon real estate.

Foraker and Hanna make an excellent senatorial team. Neither can be spared without impairing the efficiency of the Ohio representation in congress.

ENGLISH OF THE ENGLISH.

"London Is a Nice Place If You Know the Language."

That hackneyed American maiden who said London was a nice place if you knew the language was not a bit absurd. We speak English, but we have built up our forms of English expression upon the English of a few shires of the old country as it was spoken between two and three centuries ago, while they have been blending and changing the speech of all their home peoples during the same period. The result is that an American can hardly utter a sentence in England without calling attention to the difference between his speech and that of the people about him.

Only yesterday, after 18 months' residence in England, I rushed up to a conductor in Charing Cross station and asked, "Which car for Bromley?" He stared at me, and I knew I had spoken a foreign tongue to him, because street vehicles like omnibuses and horse cars are called road cars and tram cars, and there are no other cars in England.

If you ask a guest at your home in England whether he likes his meat rare, he asks what you said because he does not understand you. He calls meat underdone when it is not thoroughly cooked. If you tell him you fear the asparagus is canned, he is at a loss again, because he would have said it was tinned. To ask him to pass the powdered sugar will again set him to wondering, for he calls it icing sugar generally, though he knows that it is sometimes called caster or sifted sugar. And if you have candy on the table you may not call it so without betraying your foreign origin, for he calls candy "sweeties," abbreviated from "sweetmeats," and used to designate all preserves, puddings, pies, candies and jams.

To go further along the eccentricities of English at the dining table most persons know, I suppose, that the beet is called beet root, cornstarch is corn flour, corned beef for a particular cut of it is called "silver sides of beef" and napkins are serviettes.—Julian Ralph in Harper's Magazine.

THERMOMETER TUBES.

Process of Their Manufacture at Jena, in Germany.

A most interesting account is given in The Idler of the wonderful state aided industry at Jena where glass and lenses are made for scientists. The industry has been built up by Professor Abbe and Dr. Schott, and has throughout been conducted by scientists whose efforts have made Jena famous among scientific men the world over. One of the most picturesque features of the Jena glassworks is the great corridor where the thermometer tubes are blown and drawn, says a correspondent.

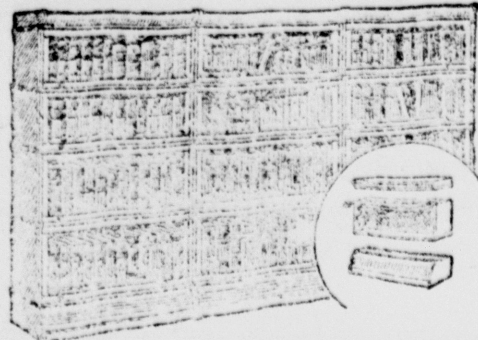

We saw this glass in process of manufacture. A boy workman caught a bit of molten glass from the furnace on the end of a blowpipe. It was hardly larger than a walnut, but by twirling and blowing and molding it grew to the size of an orange, with the shape of an orange. More glass was then added, and there was more rolling and blowing, and when the proper stage was reached the blowpipe was passed quickly to the brawny master workman.

He, in his turn, added glass, blowing from time to time with cheeks out-puffed until it seemed as though they must burst, and then rolling the great ball of glass on his iron kneading board until it looked like a huge yellow gourd. Faster and faster he worked, keeping the ball always symmetrical and yet white hot. At length he lifted the glowing mass quickly in the air, and a second workman attached the blowpipe at the bottom. Then the two men ran in opposite directions, twirling the pipes and blowing lustily from time to time. From a thick, partly yellow globe the glass thinned out quickly as the men ran apart, until it became a dull red tube not larger than a man's little finger and nearly 300 feet long. Sometimes in drawing these tubes one of the blowers would not only run the length of the corridor, but far outside on the hill.

LABOR AND CAPITAL PROBLEM,

Discussed in Their Labor Day Addresses, at Different Points—Big Parade at Pittsburg, of Which Shaffer for Wcs Chief Marshal.

Kansas City, Mo., Sept. 3.—Labor Day was marked by the largest and most imposing parade of labor unions ever seen here, and by the participation of William J. Bryan in the procession and exercises. Eight thousand men marched through the streets, grouped in their uniforms, and each union wearing a distinguishing uniform. Mr. Bryan occupied a carriage at the head of the line, and was cheered as he was recognized. A striking feature of the parade was the "hodcarriers' union, negroes, 225 men, led by a negro band.

There was speaking and athletic games at the park in the afternoon, and last night there were more addresses. The orator of the afternoon was William J. Bryan, who was preceded by Mayor Reed.

Mr. Bryan said in part:

Should Use the Ballot.
"If the laboring men were half as active on election day as they are in enforcement of their strikes, they would right the evils which beset them."

"The offer of the trust to divide with the laboring man is a pitfall. Can you trust the corporations to divide honestly? No. How many of you would like to try a lawsuit, when the judge on the bench is the opposing party to the suit? There are good judges, good juries, yet do you want judges and juries to try your cases when they are interested in the outcome themselves? When you permit private monopoly to dictate terms of division, then you place yourselves wholly at their mercy. You allow them to water their stock and then expect them to divide with labor on a just basis.

"You are witnessing a battle between labor and the great steel trust. This trust was willing to unionize some of its mills, but would have others open to non-union labor. Why? Because the trust wants some mills that it can depend on in the event of a strike. It is an unequal struggle, for the trust can shut down its mills for a year, but laboring men cannot live a year without work. It is your duty to crush monopolies with the best resource at your command, the ballot.

"I am opposed to government by injunction, not that it is directed especially against the laboring man, but that it does away with trial by jury. It is a menace, not only to one class, but to all. It is within the power of the laboring man to do away with the system."

Roosevelt Spoke in Minneapolis.

Minneapolis, Minn., Sept. 3.—The vice president was the orator of the day at the formal opening of the Minnesota state fair, by invitation of the Minnesota Agricultural society. He shook hands at a reception following the exercises; was the guest of the fair association at lunch on the grounds and received the Third Infantry and First artillery, Minnesota national guard. Colonel Roosevelt occupied the judges' stand at the race track with General Miles, Archbishop Ireland and Governor Van Sant, of Minnesota. The grand stand was literally packed, and when Governor Van Sant introduced the honored guest the welcome was one the vice president will long remember. The audience was enthusiastic throughout the address and he had frequently to pause to make himself heard.

Part of the afternoon was spent by the vice presidential party in viewing the exhibits.

The vice president said in part:

State Control of Combines.

ests of wage workers, and which shall discriminate in favor of the honest and humane employer by removing the disadvantage under which he stands when compared with unscrupulous competitors who have no conscience and will do right only under fear of punishment. Nor can legislation stop with what are termed labor questions. The vast individual and corporate fortunes, the vast combinations of capital, which have marked the development of our industrial system create new conditions and necessitate a change from the old attitude of the state and nation toward prosperity.

"Our interests are at bottom common. In the long run we go up or down together. Yet more and more it is evident that the state, and if necessary the nation, has got to possess the right of supervision and control as regards the great corporations which are its creatures; particularly as regards the great business combinations which derive a portion of their importance from the existence of some monopolistic tendency."

SHAFFER IN THE PARADE.

Big Labor Demonstration at Pittsburg—The Marching Followed by a Picnic and Speeches.

Pittsburg, Sept. 3.—Pittsburg had a great Labor Day demonstration. Over 15,000 workmen took part in the demonstration, which received unusual significance from the fact that the Amalgamated association has a big fight on its hands. Along the line of march these men were the center of attraction. They were given the position of honor in the parade—the right of the line, and were followed by the miners.

The enthusiasm that greeted President Shaffer as he rode at the head of the first division down Fifth avenue was noticeable, but Shaffer seemed to be in a deep study and hardly looked to the right or left. At one point on the avenue a number of his admirers were gathered and they cheered lustily, but the Amalgamated chief had gone past and did not hear them.

From the moment the parade broke up the attention of the holiday crowds was centered on Ross Grove, where the formal exercises of the day took place. President Shaffer and other prominent speakers repaired to the grove and the afternoon was given up to speechmaking, while sports and other features added to the interest of the occasion.

The speakers who were scheduled to address the people in the grove were President Shaffer, whose address was mainly on the strike of the steel workers and what led up to it; Simon Burns, of the glass workers; George Churchill and William J. Brennan, general counsel for the Amalgamated association. The athletic events and all other amusements provided for the day afforded plenty of excitement.

Excursions were run on all the roads and brought many people to the city, and the crowds along the route of the parade were not nearly all composed of city people. Many of the downtown stores were closed.

LABOR CELEBRATION

IN INDIANA.

Alexandria, Ind., Sept. 3.—Labor Day in the gas belt was appropriately celebrated here. The gas belt towns that were represented by the unions in a body were Marion, Wabash, Gas City, Jonesboro, Fairmount, Matthews, Summitville, Upland, Converse, Frankton, Noblesville, Attica, Atlantic, Greentown and Everson, Middletown, Hartford City, Montpelier, Dunkirk, Elwood, Crestes, Windfall, Red Key, Sims and Alexandria.

Parades in Wilkesbarre and Pittston.

Wilkesbarre, Sept. 3.—Labor Day was more generally observed in the anthracite coal region than for years past. There was an entire suspension of work at the mines and factories, the employees all taking part in big parades held in this city and Pittston. Business was also suspended in Wilkesbarre and all surrounding towns.

Morrison Spoke at Reading.

Reading, Pa., Sept. 3.—Labor Day was celebrated here with a parade of 4,500 men, representing more than 40 trade unions. At a mass meeting following the parade the principal speaker was Frank Morrison, of Washington, secretary of the American Federation of Labor.

The dead are:
Harry McKee, aged 11 years, son of the proprietor, who slept in a room over the kitchen; burned to death while trying to escape from his room.
The injured are:
Miss Della Campbell, a domestic, aged 23 years, burned about the face, neck, head and body; is at the Mercy hospital, and may not recover.
John M. Gray, aged 28 years, a boarder, who lives at Gray station, both hands and feet badly burned and cut; taken to West Penn hospital.

Harry Mardis, aged 21 years, of Cramer, Indiana county, a boarder, hands and feet burned and cut; taken to West Penn hospital.

Mary Woloshin, aged 20 years, of Seventh street, Southside, a domestic in the hotel, burned about the head, face and hands; taken to the home of H. Sleshin, No. 131 Frankstown avenue; will recover.

Miss Campbell went to the kitchen of the hotel to get breakfast. In lighting the gasoline stove it did not work right, and when she opened the valve a big flow of gasoline followed. This exploded.

FLINN IS REFUSED.

Believed Gov. Stone Declined to Remove the Pittsburg Recorder.

LATTER'S AX AGAIN SWUNG.

He Expelled Anderson, Director of Department of Charities and Corrections, and Appointed William W. Nesbit to the Place.

Atlantic City, N. J., Sept. 3.—Senator William Flinn left for Pittsburg last night. He came here with a score of his retainers and political associates bent upon securing the official head of Recorder A. M. Brown of Pittsburg. He made a demand upon Governor Stone for the immediate decapitation of the recorder, who has played such havoc with Flinn's friends in his sweeping removals from office. The recorder acted upon his own motion and surprised the governor, who has been trying to bring about harmony in the Republican organization of Allegheny.

Flinn, after leaving the governor, went direct to his hotel, where he got several of his friends in secret conference. At about 5:30 o'clock Flinn came out alone from his room and handed to the newspaper men this statement:

"I have had an interview with the governor. I am under pledge not to even intimate to any one the result of the interview. The state ticket will receive honest and loyal support and my friends are now and will be in active hostility to the government of Pittsburg as now constituted. This hostility will continue until the Republican organization again regains control of the government of the city of Pittsburg. For any further information you must see the governor."

Pittsburg, Sept. 3.—Recorder Brown yesterday afternoon reached a decision on the appointment of a director of the department of charities, and his official action was made known in the following order:

"I, A. M. Brown, city recorder of the city of Pittsburg, in the Commonwealth of Pennsylvania, do hereby remove John M. Anderson from the office of director of the department of charities and corrections and William W. Nesbit is hereby appointed the director of the department of charities and corrections of the said city."

CANDIDATES SHOULD BEWARE.

Which Says It's Dangerous to Come Out Too Early.

Kansas City, Mo., Aug. 3.—C. A. Walsh, secretary of the Democratic national committee, is here on business, and said in an interview:

There is Hill and Olney, and Dockery and Dave Francis, and W. J. Stone and Senator Cockrell, but it's a long time until 1904. Mrs. William James, who lives at 283 Third street, says: "I was troubled off and on for eight years with a weakness of the back and kidneys, a dull, aching pain across my loins up under my shoulder blades and rheumatic pains in my right shoulder. I was very susceptible to changes of the weather, and was so bad at times that I could scarcely stand and support my own weight. The trouble affected my nervous system, causing a frequent fluttering of the heart and shortness of breath. I generally resorted to porous plasters, but the relief was only temporary. I got Doan's Kidney Pills at the W. & W. pharmacy, obtained instant relief and finally a cure."

NATIVES TOOK OATH.

TWO FILIPINOS NOW ON THE TAFT COMMISSION.

The Third One Too Ill—Other Commissioners Also Sworn—Tavera Optimum.

Manila, Sept. 3.—There were appropriate ceremonies in the palace at the inauguration of Dr. Pardo de Tavera and Benito Legado as members of the Philippine commission. Jose Luzuriaga, the third Filipino member, was to have taken the oath of office at the same time, but was unable to do so owing to illness.

Civil Governor Taft said that the ceremony does not fully complete the government the president intends forming, but sufficient has been done to show the nature of the policy to be followed. Municipal governments have been generally formed of a substantially autonomous character. Their officers are entirely natives. The provincial governments are partly American and partly Filipino, it being the purpose of the president to form a government in which the native element will be able to voice the desires of the people, their local aspirations and necessities, and give the Filipinos an example of American institutions and the customs and laws prevailing in the United States. The happiness of the people will result from practical government, and not from theories on the part of many Philippine gentlemen, who appear to desire to multiply the difficulties of the government by creating new parties to embody political theories when they might more profitably advance their country's welfare by devoting their time and talents to amending and improving the laws of the legally constituted body. There will be time enough for theories when the government is running smoothly. Sunday was the anniversary of the beginning of legislative work. The commission will have worked hard and much will have been accomplished if they feel they have advanced with the same progression a year hence and will be assured of the success of their efforts.

Dr. de Tavera said that hardly had the people begun to appreciate the work of pacification than they were accorded the institutions of peace. The enemy of the evening before began the next morning to aid their adversaries in building roads and houses and introducing acts of peace. The day was not far distant when the Filipinos would enter a legislative body for the islands, elected by the people. Conditions prevent the elections at present. The Filipinos consider today to be solemn and grand, because it is the first time they have been given part in the supreme government. They believe that the day is coming when the American constitution, as a whole, without amputations, would be planted here, as the flag now is.

The other commissioners also took the oath of office. It is in the plans of the military authorities, as a step toward reducing the force to make two departments instead of four, which would result in a considerable saving. The headquarters of one department would be Manila and of the other Iloilo.

Each day shows an increasing number of surrenders and captures in all the disaffected districts. Later accounts of the recent engagement in Batangas province between Captain H. C. Hale with a detachment of the Twentieth infantry, and the insurgent leader, Gonzales, show that it was more important than it was first considered. Many desertions and renegades were seen and heard giving commands in English. Colonel Francis, two officers and 50 men were killed after an engagement lasting about three hours.

It was reported in London that at the forthcoming meeting of the German and Russian emperors many important questions will be discussed, principal among them being that of trade relations between the two countries.

Back From the Philippines.

About all the volunteers are back from the Philippines, where they have had a long, hard experience of soldier life. Nearly all report the health of the soldiers good, except for frequent attacks of dysentery and diarrhoea. The 51st Iowa regiment on leaving San Francisco took a case of Chamberlain's Colic, Cholera and Diarrhoea Remedy with them, and many soldiers carried single bottles. This was soon used up and found so effective that a constant demand for it resulted in a large shipment being made from the factory at Des Moines. A teaspoonful of it in a little water always has the desired effect. Sold by Alvin H. Bulger, Druggist.

An Ant For a Pet.

One of the queerest little pets ever seen is the tame ant belonging to a well known scientist. This man keeps tribes of ants in nests which he has made himself and feeds them with honey or sugar through a tube that connects with the nests. One day he saw that one of the ants kept coming into the tube to eat up the honey in the glass bulb at the end. When he took out the cork that closed the bulb, the insect came to look for the food, and he offered it some honey on the point of a needle, says the New York Tribune.

The ant shrank back at first, then drew nearer, feeling about with its antennae, until it reached the needle. Soon it learned to take the honey off its keeper's finger, although ants are among the most timid of living things, and a new odor or the least movement outside their nests usually drives these little insects away.

This ant is now so tame that it quits the bulb as soon as the cork is removed and goes to find the honey on the scientist's finger. When its meal is over, it does not try to hurry away, but waits till its master lifts it on a bristle and carries it back to its nest.

LABOR AND CAPITAL PROBLEM,

Discussed in Their Labor Day Addresses, at Different Points—Big Parade at Pittsburg, of Which Shaffer Was Chief Marshal.

Kansas City, Mo., Sept. 3.—Labor Day was marked by the largest and most imposing parade of labor unions ever seen here, and by the participation of William J. Bryan in the procession and exercises. Eight thousand men marched through the streets, grouped in their uniforms, and each union wearing a distinguishing uniform. Mr. Bryan occupied a carriage at the head of the line, and was cheered as he was recognized. A striking feature of the parade was the "hodcarriers' union, negroes, 225 men, led by a negro band.

There was speaking and athletic games at the park in the afternoon, and last night there were more addresses. The orator of the afternoon was William J. Bryan, who was preceded by Mayor Reed.

Mr. Bryan said in part:

Should Use the Ballot.
"If the laboring men were half as active on election day as they are in enforcement of their strikes, they would right the evils which beset them."

"The offer of the trust to divide with the laboring man is a pitfall. Can you trust the corporations to divide honestly? No. How many of you would like to try a lawsuit, when the judge on the bench is the opposing party to the suit? There are good judges, good juries, yet do you want judges and juries to try your cases when they are interested in the outcome themselves? When you permit private monopoly to dictate terms of division, then you place yourselves wholly at their mercy. You allow them to water their stock and then expect them to divide with labor on a just basis."

"You are witnessing a battle between labor and the great steel trust. This trust was willing to unionize some of its mills, but would have others open to non-union labor. Why? Because the trust wants some mills that it can depend on in the event of a strike. It is an unequal struggle, for the trust can shut down its mills for a year, but laboring men cannot live a year without work. It is your duty to crush monopolies with the best resource at your command, the ballot."

"I am opposed to government by injunction, not that it is directed especially against the laboring man, but that it does away with trial by jury. It is a menace, not only to one class, but to all. It is within the power of the laboring man to do away with the system."

Roosevelt Spoke in Minneapolis.

Minneapolis, Minn., Sept. 3.—The vice president was the orator of the day at the formal opening of the Minnesota state fair, by invitation of the Minnesota Agricultural society. He shook hands at a reception following the exercises; was the guest of the fair association at lunch on the grounds and received the Third Infantry and First artillery, Minnesota national guard. Colonel Roosevelt occupied the judges' stand at the race track with General Miles, Archbishop Ireland and Governor Van Sant, of Minnesota. The grand stand was literally packed, and when Governor Van Sant introduced the honored guest the welcome was one the vice president will long remember. The audience was enthusiastic throughout the address and he had frequently to pause to make himself heard.

Part of the afternoon was spent by the vice presidential party in viewing the exhibits.

The vice president said in part:

State Control of Combines.

ests of wage workers, and which shall discriminate in favor of the honest and humane employer by removing the disadvantage under which he stands when compared with unscrupulous competitors who have no conscience and will do right only under fear of punishment. Nor can legislation stop with what are termed labor questions. The vast individual and corporate fortunes, the vast combinations of capital, which have marked the development of our industrial system create new conditions and necessitate a change from the old attitude of the state and nation toward prosperity."

"Our interests are at bottom common. In the long run we go up or down together. Yet more and more it is evident that the state, and if necessary the nation, has got to possess the right of supervision and control as regards the great corporations which are its creatures; particularly as regards the great business combinations which derive a portion of their importance from the existence of some monopolistic tendency."

SHAFER IN THE PARADE.
A Big Labor Demonstration at Pittsburg—The Marching Followed by a Picnic and Speeches.

Pittsburg, Sept. 3.—Pittsburg had a great Labor Day demonstration. Over 15,000 workmen took part in the demonstration, which received unusual significance from the fact that the Amalgamated association has a big fight on its hands. Along the line of march these men were the center of attraction. They were given the position of honor in the parade—the right of the line, and were followed by the miners.

The enthusiasm that greeted President Shaffer as he rode at the head of the first division down Fifth avenue was noticeable, but Shaffer seemed to be in a deep study and hardly looked to the right or left. At one point on the avenue a number of his admirers were gathered and they cheered lustily, but the Amalgamated chief had gone past and did not hear them.

From the moment the parade broke up the attention of the holiday crowds was centered on Ross Grove, where the formal exercises of the day took place. President Shaffer and other prominent speakers repaired to the grove and the afternoon was given up to speechmaking, while sports and other features added to the interest of the occasion.

The speakers who were scheduled to address the people in the grove were President Shaffer, whose address was mainly on the strike of the steel workers and what led up to it; Simon Burns, of the glass workers; George Churchill and William J. Brennan, general counsel for the Amalgamated association. The athletic events and all other amusements provided for the day afforded plenty of excitement.

Excursions were run on all the roads and brought many people to the city, and the crowds along the route of the parade were not nearly all composed of city people. Many of the downtown stores were closed.

LABOR CELEBRATION IN INDIANA.

Alexandria, Ind., Sept. 3.—Labor Day in the gas belt was appropriately celebrated here. The gas belt towns that were represented by the unions in a body were Marion, Wabash, Gas City, Jonesboro, Fairmont, Matthews, Summitville, Upland, Converse, Frankton, Noblesville, Attica, Atlantic, Greentown and Everson, Middletown, Hartford City, Montpelier, Dunkirk, Elwood, Crestes, Windfall, Red Key, Sims and Alexandria.

Parades in Wilkesbarre and Pittston.
Wilkesbarre, Sept. 3.—Labor Day was more generally observed in the anthracite coal region than for years past. There was an entire suspension of work at the mines and factories, the employees all taking part in big parades held in this city and Pittston. Business was also suspended in Wilkesbarre and all surrounding towns.

Morrison Spoke at Reading.
Reading, Pa., Sept. 3.—Labor Day was celebrated here with a parade of 4,500 men, representing more than 40 trades unions. At a mass meeting following the parade the principal speaker was Frank Morrison, of Washington, secretary of the American Federation of Labor.

They believe that the day is coming when the American constitution, as a whole, without emendations, would be planted here, as the flag now is.

The other commissioners also took the oath of office.

It is in the plans of the military authorities, as a step toward reducing the force to make two departments instead of four, which would result in a considerable saving. The headquarters of one department would be Manila and of the other Iloilo.

Each day shows an increasing number of surrenders and captures in all the disaffected districts. Later accounts of the recent engagement in Batangas province between Captain H. C. Hale with a detachment of the Twentieth infantry, and the insurgent leader, Gonzales, show that it was more important than it was first considered. Many desertions and renegades were seen and heard giving commands in English. Colonel Francis, two officers and 50 men were killed after an engagement lasting about three hours.

SOME HAPPENINGS ABROAD.

Reports show that the resumption of the condition that existed prior to the war has resulted in an increased trade between the United States and Spain.

Consul General Rublee, of Hong Kong, reports a sentiment in the Orient favoring the proposed Pacific cable which the United States may build.

It was reported in London that at the forthcoming meeting of the German and Russian emperors many important questions will be discussed, principal among them being that of trade relations between the two countries.

Oswald Shick, of Bridgeport, 25 years ago, borrowed a hatchet from Miss Maggie Adolph, who conducted a restaurant. Miss Adolph told him he needn't be in a hurry about returning it. He returned it last week.

Back From the Philippines.

About all the volunteers are back from the Philippines, where they have had a long, hard experience of soldier life. Nearly all report the health of the soldiers good, except for frequent attacks of dysentery and diarrhoea. The 51st Iowa regiment on leaving San Francisco took a case of Chamberlain's Colic, Cholera and Diarrhoea Remedy with them, and many soldiers carried single bottles. This was soon used up and found so effective that a constant demand for it resulted in a large shipment being made from the factory at Des Moines. A teaspoonful of it in a little water always has the desired effect. Sold by Alvin H. Bulger, Druggist.

An Ant For a Pet.

One of the queerest little pets ever seen is the tame ant belonging to a well known scientist. This man keeps tribes of ants in nests which he has made himself and feeds them with honey or sugar through a tube that connects with the nests. One day he saw that one of the ants kept coming into the tube to eat up the honey in the glass bulb at the end. When he took out the cork that closed the bulb, the insect came to look for the food, and he offered it some honey on the point of a needle, says the New York Tribune.

The ant shrank back at first, then drew nearer, feeling about with its antennae, until it reached the needle. Soon it learned to take the honey off its keeper's finger, although ants are among the most timid of living things, and a new odor or the least movement outside their nests usually drives these little insects away.

This ant is now so tame that it quits the bulb as soon as the cork is removed and goes to find the honey on the scientist's finger. When its meal is over, it does not try to hurry away, but waits till its master lifts it on a bristle and carries it back to its nest.

To Whom It May Concern—I was a sufferer from stomach trouble until I was induced to try a bottle of Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin and I want to say that in my opinion it has no equal as a stomach remedy. I had tried many different remedies, but none with the happy results of Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin.

OBITUARY.

Mrs. Sarah Swaney.

Mrs. Sarah Swaney died at the home of her daughter, Mrs. John W.
Hall, 108 Kossuth street, at 6:30 a.
m. yesterday at the age of 83 years.
Mrs. Swaney was one of the pioneers of Green township, Beaver county, Pa. She was the daughter of Hezekiah Wallace and was born near Hookstown, where she lived all of her life. She married John Swaney and reared a large family, four of whom are dead. One of these was James Swaney, a very prominent young United Presbyterian minister. Another was H. W. Swaney, a member of Company H, One Hundred and Fortieth regiment Pennsylvania volunteers, who lost his life at Spotsylvania Court House May 12, 1864. The other two died in infancy. The survivors are Robert M. and Jehiel B. Swaney, prominent farmers near Hookstown; H. H.
Swaney, a prominent attorney of Mc-Keesport, Pa.; Cynthia J., wife of Rev.
W. J. Cooper, of Butler, Pa., and Mira Anna, wife of John W. Hall, of this city.

Mrs. Swaney's death was the closing of a long and useful Christian life.
Her family loses one of the best of mothers, the church a staunch supporter and the poor a kind friend.

The remains can be viewed this evening at the home of her daughter, Mrs. John W. Hall, from 7 to 9 this evening. Funeral services will be held at her home in Hookstown, Pa., at 10 a. m. tomorrow. Interment at Mill Creek cemetery.

PACKED TO THE DOORS

The Opera House Filled And a Good Play Presented.

The society drama, "Tide of Fortune," was presented at the Grand opera house last evening to "standing room only." The house was packed to the doors long before the curtain rose. Judging from the enthusiasm with which the Dilger-Cornell Repertoire company was received on the opening night, the week's engagement will be a phenomenal success.

The company is made up of very clever people, and some of the specialty acts were of unusual excellence, particularly that of Miss Lillian Anderson and Mr. Dilger. As for the play, it is a strong one, in which pathetic and humorous situations abound. Gordon McDowell, as Tom Lowder, the man with money to burn, is a finished actor and carried out his role in the best possible style. His support was good. Tonight there will be an entire change of bill.

MARRIED VERY QUIETLY

But Their Friends Found It Out And Gave Them a Reception.

Charles Ralston and Miss Minnie Matlock were married at the home of the bride's parents at Brilliant Sun-

The couple were very mysterious in their actions and the intention was that none of their friends here should know of their marriage, but it became known in time for a large number of their most intimate acquaintances to give them a warm reception when they returned to this city yesterday.
Both have been employed here.

CAMPAIGN OPENING

Democrats Will Fire Their First Gun
at Bucyrus, September 28.

Columbus, Sept. 3.—(Special)—The Democratic executive committee met Monday afternoon and arranged for the fall campaign. The party will confine itself to state issues. The campaign will be opened at Bucyrus on Saturday, September 28, one week later than the Republican opening.
The speakers will be Colonel Kilbourne, Tom Johnson, Judson C. Harmon, of Cincinnati, attorney general
during the Cleveland administration, and C. W. Baker, of Cincinnati.

Bucyrus was the only city which put in a claim for the opening. The appointment of the chiefs of the bureau was placed in the hands of Chairman Daugherty and Secretary Gilliam, with power to act. There will be no joint debate between Governor Nash and Colonel Kilbourne. The committee disapproved of the plan.

TWO WILLS FILED

One Disposes of a $700 Estate Situated in Salem Township.

Lisbon, Sept. 3.—(Special)—The will of the late John J. Yates, of Pe-ry township, has been admitted to probate. It disposes of an estate valued at $7,000. It leaves to John N.
Yates, of Salem, a son, the sum of $4,000; to Laura Y. Armstrong, of Marion, Ia., a daughter, $2,000; to Eliza
J. Hardinger, of Missouri, a daughter,
$1,000. John N. Yates and Galen A.
Sheets are named as executors without bond.

The will of Mrs. Nancy Brinkle, late of Salem township, was admitted to probate today. Her two sons, Eli and Eminor, are each given 20 acres of land in Salem township and were appointed executors without bond.

Cigars Are Rights and Lefts.

"It is not always because a cigar is badly made that the wrapper curls up and works off," said a tobacco dealer.
"It is often because a right handed man is smoking a left handed cigar.
Sounds strange, hey? Well, a left handed cigar is one rolled by the maker's left hand, for all cigar makers must be ambidextrous. A piece of tobacco for a wrapper is cut on the bias and is rolled from left to right on the filler. The other piece, for reasons of economy, is then used and must be rolled the opposite way by the operator's other hand. Hence a smoker who holds his cigar in his right hand sometimes in twisting it about rubs the wrapper the wrong way and unloosens
it."—Philadelphia Times.

Unavoidable.

"Why do you wander aimlessly from place to place?" inquired the philanthropist.

"Well," answered Meandering Mike,
"eight hours' sleep a day is enough for anybody. And we's gotter do someth'g wid' de other 16 hours, ain't we?"—

EDUCATION OF FILIPINOS

Problems Confronting the Establishment of American Schools.

HARD WORK FOR NEW TEACHERS.

A Complete Change From Spanish
Methods and Ideas Necessary—The Difficulties in Teaching the Little Filipino—How the Schoolma'ams
Will Be Assigned.

The distribution of the new teachers to their stations has caused a keen realization of the tremendous problems confronting the establishment of American schools in these islands, writes the Manila correspondent of the New York Post.

To realize the peculiar difficulties in educating the little Filipinos it is necessary to sweep from the mind every American idea of schools, of conveyance, of communication and of language. Then imagine an area as long as from Maine to Florida, as broad as from Boston to Chicago! Over this expanse are scattered 150 inhabited islands, with over 1,000 smaller ones.
There is but one railroad in the whole archipelago, and that a poor third rate line from Manila to Dagupan, a distance as far as from Washington to Philadelphia. The remainder of the islands have no railroad, no public conveyance like stagecoaches, no express companies and very few wagon roads.
The great majority of travel is over trails which lead here and there from village to village, often over steep mountains and through large streams.

The Spanish idea of education consisted in an ability to read the prayers of the church, write a little and figure still less. The schools had been conducted as branches of the church, and the whole idea was to prevent the natives, except a selected few, from gaining any adequate education. There was consequently no basis on which to build, no organization, no uniformity in anything.

This in merest outline was the condition of affairs when Dr. Atkinson took up the task of providing an American school system. He began work with but a single clerk and an interpreter, with half a dozen American teachers for work in the city of Manila and such meager information as was obtainable a year ago about school affairs in this unknown country.

The preliminary work was like the backing of a passage through a tangled tropical jungle. A few books and supplies were sent to military posts for distribution, and detailed soldiers gathered a few children together and taught them as best they could. Villages were encouraged to supply native teachers and start schools. Then some of the volunteer soldiers who preferred to remain awhile on the islands were examined and appointed for the first rough pioneer work, together with a few wives of army officers. Thus the work proceeded, being systematized and improved week by week, so that at the beginning of June over 100 teachers were scattered singly through the length and breadth of the archipelago, and 50 more in the city of Manila were teaching English and exercising influence over probably 2,000 schools.

The question of textbooks was a puzzling one. Obviously instruction by Americans could not proceed along the lines of native dialects, and Spanish was almost as objectionable. The familiar American primers are not quite suitable, as the familiar objects of American or European childhood are lacking here, and the fruits are entirely different. School buildings as separate structures are rarely seen, classes being held in some room of a private house rented for the purpose. Even the roughest of benches are scarce, and thousands of native children squat on the floor.

The educational act was passed in January, and then the work began in earnest. Hundreds of tons of carefully selected textbooks and school supplies were ordered in February, many orders being cabled, and as an example of the disadvantages under which the work must be done it may be stated that less than half have yet arrived in Manila.
No women teachers will be sent to ungarrisoned towns and only to such places as already have some American women, wives of officers or civilians.
To a few exceptionally good towns they will be sent in twos. The great advantage of having husband and wife who are both trained teachers is keenly realized. Of the 800 appointed only one-fifth were women, but the arrivals
thus far have been evenly divided.

Many curious things happen in school work here. From one place comes the complaint that the benches have been removed from the schoolroom and used in a saloon run by a friend of the native teacher. Questions as to the duties and authority of native and American teachers in the absence of definite law cause much perplexity. In one of the Manila schools a native woman teacher, proving unsatisfactory, was discharged. The schoolroom is located on the upper floor of a private house, and a sister of the discharged teacher occupies rooms on the ground floor. The American teacher wondered at the small attendance until it was discovered that the sister was chasing the pupils away that they might attend a rival school just across the way which had been organized by the discharged teacher as a church school.

The innumerable fiestas, general and local, cause much annoyance. One teacher reported: "Fiesta of the village saint. Wicked to attend school on fiesta day. So all the children attended the cockfight instead." The appearance of a cloud of grasshoppers caused the same children to bolt out of school, for sun dried grasshopper, with a little sugar dried in, is a great delicacy.

London, Sept. 3.—Dr. Krause, for-

He will be arraigned today at Bow

For the past four months Dr.

cantly his allegiance to the British crown, he secretly forwarded information to the Boers.

The warrant was issued some time

The schools open today, and many a parent, who, for the past three months has been worrying whether his child was engaged in mischief or harmless recreation, will have the satisfaction of knowing that, for a few hours at least each day, the youngster is well occupied. Our schools are among our noblest institutions. They are always improving, never retrograding. The youth who is getting his education in this twentieth century has advantages and opportunities which are immensely superior to those which his father and mother had. There is no excuse in these days for ignorance of the rudimentary branches of knowledge; they are within the reach of every one. Education is a necessity of modern life. The state fully realizes that good citizenship is dependent upon intelligence, and it makes generous provision for popular education. Compulsory laws can do much to make the schools fulfill their mission; but the counsel and encouragement of parents are far more potent in giving pupils a start in the right direction. Don't let your son or daughter become an idler in school if you can prevent it. If the child is allowed to neglect his school lessons, the lessons which he will have to learn later in life will come much harder to him.

Bryan, after being hissed in the Ohio Democratic convention and ignored in the state platform, is to be invited to come to this state and make campaign speeches for the party. It requires a vast amount of cheek, after snubbing a man unmercifully, to turn around and ask him to lend you a friendly hand. But Ohio Democrats were never lacking in cheek. All Republicans sincerely hope that Mr. Bryan will overlook the snub—being pretty well accustomed to things of that sort—and accept the invitation. A dozen Bryan speeches would help the cause of Republicanism in Ohio as much as anything we know of.

OBITUARY.

Mrs. Sarah Swaney.

Mrs. Sarah Swaney died at the home of her daughter, Mrs. John W. Hall, 108 Kossuth street, at 6:30 a. m. yesterday at the age of 83 years.

Mrs. Swaney was one of the pioneers of Green township, Beaver county, Pa. She was the daughter of Ezekiah Wallace and was born near Hookstown, where she lived all of her life. She married John Swaney and reared a large family, four of whom are dead. One of these was James Swaney, a very prominent young United Presbyterian minister. Another was H. W. Swaney, a member of Company H, One Hundred and Fortieth regiment Pennsylvania volunteers, who lost his life at Spotsylvania Court House May 12, 1864. The other two died in infancy. The survivors are Robert M. and Jehiel B. Swaney, prominent farmers near Hookstown; H. H. Swaney, a prominent attorney of McKeesport, Pa.; Cynthia J., wife of Rev. W. J. Cooper, of Butler, Pa., and Mira Anna, wife of John W. Hall, of this city.

Mrs. Swaney's death was the closing of a long and useful Christian life. Her family loses one of the best of mothers, the church a staunch supporter and the poor a kind friend.

The remains can be viewed this evening at the home of her daughter, Mrs. John W. Hall, from 7 to 9 this evening. Funeral services will be held at her home in Hookstown, Pa., at 10 a. m. tomorrow. Interment at Mill Creek cemetery.

PACKED TO THE DOORS

The Opera House Filled And a Good Play Presented.

The society drama, "Tide of Fortune," was presented at the Grand opera house last evening to "standing room only." The house was packed to the doors long before the curtain rose. Judging from the enthusiasm with which the Dilger-Cornell Repertory company was received on the opening night, the week's engagement will be a phenomenal success.

The company is made up of very clever people, and some of the specialty acts were of unusual excellence, particularly that of Miss Lillian Anderson and Mr. Dilger. As for the play, it is a strong one, in which pathetic and humorous situations abound. Gordon McDowell, as Tom Lowder, the man with money to burn, is a finished actor and carried out his role in the best possible style. His support was good. Tonight there will be an entire change of bill.

MARRIED VERY QUIETLY

But Their Friends Found It Out And Gave Them a Reception.

Charles Ralston and Miss Minnie Matlock were married at the home of the bride's parents at Brilliant Sunday afternoon.

The couple were very mysterious in their actions and the intention was that none of their friends here should know of their marriage, but it became known in time for a large number of their most intimate acquaintances to give them a warm reception when they returned to this city yesterday. Both have been employed here.

Harmon, of Cincinnati, attorney general during the Cleveland administration, and C. W. Baker, of Cincinnati.

Cigars Are Rights and Lefts.

"It is not always because a cigar is badly made that the wrapper curls up and works off," said a tobacco dealer. "It is often because a right handed man is smoking a left handed cigar. Sounds strange, hey? Well, a left handed cigar is one rolled by the maker's left hand, for all cigar makers must be ambidextrous. A piece of tobacco for a wrapper is cut on the bias and is rolled from left to right on the filler. The other piece, for reasons of economy, is then used and must be rolled the opposite way by the operator's other hand. Hence a smoker who holds his cigar in his right hand sometimes in twisting it about rubs the wrapper the wrong way and unloosens it."—Philadelphia Times.

"Well," answered Meandering Mike, "eight hours' sleep a day is enough for anybody. And we've got to do something wit' de other 16 hours, ain't we?"—Washington Star.

Problems Confronting the Establishment of American Schools.

HARD WORK FOR NEW TEACHERS.

A Complete Change From Spanish Methods and Ideas Necessary—The Difficulties in Teaching the Little Filipino—How the Schoolmasters Will Be Assigned.

The distribution of the new teachers to their stations has caused a keen realization of the tremendous problems confronting the establishment of American schools in these islands, writes the Manila correspondent of the New York Post.

To realize the peculiar difficulties in educating the little Filipinos it is necessary to sweep from the mind every American idea of schools, of conveyance, of communication and of language. Then imagine an area as long as from Maine to Florida, as broad as from Boston to Chicago! Over this expanse are scattered 150 inhabited islands, with over 1,000 smaller ones. There is but one railroad in the whole archipelago, and that a poor third rate line from Manila to Dagupan, a distance as far as from Washington to Philadelphia. The remainder of the islands have no railroad, no public conveyance like stagecoaches, no express companies and very few wagon roads. The great majority of travel is over trails which lead here and there from village to village, often over steep mountains and through large streams.

The Spanish idea of education consisted in an ability to read the prayers of the church, write a little and figure still less. The schools had been conducted as branches of the church, and the whole idea was to prevent the natives, except a selected few, from gaining any adequate education. There was consequently no basis on which to build, no organization, no uniformity in anything.

This in merest outline was the condition of affairs when Dr. Atkinson took up the task of providing an American school system. He began work with but a single clerk and an interpreter, with half a dozen American teachers for work in the city of Manila and such meager information as was obtainable a year ago about school affairs in this unknown country.

The preliminary work was like the hacking of a passage through a tangled tropical jungle. A few books and supplies were sent to military posts for distribution, and detailed soldiers gathered a few children together and taught them as best they could. Villages were encouraged to supply native teachers and start schools. Then some of the volunteer soldiers who preferred to remain awhile on the islands were examined and appointed for the first rough pioneer work, together with a few wives of army officers. Thus the work proceeded, being systematized and improved week by week, so that at the beginning of June over 100 teachers were scattered singly through the length and breadth of the archipelago, and 50 more in the city of Manila were teaching English and exercising influence over probably 2,000 schools.

The question of textbooks was a puzzling one. Obviously instruction by Americans could not proceed along the lines of native dialects, and Spanish was almost as objectionable. The familiar American primers are not quite suitable, as the familiar objects of American or European childhood are lacking here, and the fruits are entirely different. School buildings as separate structures are rarely seen, classes being held in some room of a private house rented for the purpose. Even the roughest of benches are scarce, and thousands of native children squat on the floor.

The educational act was passed in January, and then the work began in earnest. Hundreds of tons of carefully selected textbooks and school supplies were ordered in February, many orders being cabled, and as an example of the disadvantages under which the work must be done it may be stated that less than half have yet arrived in Manila.

No women teachers will be sent to ungarrisoned towns and only to such places as already have some American women, wives of officers or civilians. To a few exceptionally good towns they will be sent in twos. The great advantage of having husband and wife who are both trained teachers is keenly realized. Of the 800 appointed only one-fifth were women, but the arrivals thus far have been evenly divided.

Many curious things happen in school work here. From one place comes the complaint that the benches have been removed from the schoolroom and used in a saloon run by a friend of the native teacher. Questions as to the duties and authority of native and American teachers in the absence of definite law cause much perplexity. In one of the Manila schools a native woman teacher, proving unsatisfactory, was discharged. The schoolroom is located on the upper floor of a private house, and a sister of the discharged teacher occupies rooms on the ground floor. The American teacher wondered at the small attendance until it was discovered that the sister was chasing the pupils away that they might attend a rival school just across the way which had been organized by the discharged teacher as a church school.

The innumerable fiestas, general and local, cause much annoyance. One teacher reported: "Fiesta of the village saint. Wicked to attend school on fiesta day. So all the children attended the cockfight instead." The appearance of a cloud of grasshoppers caused the same children to bolt out of school, for sun dried grasshopper, with a little sugar dried in, is a great delicacy.

WON TWO GAMES WITH MUCH EASE

East Liverpool Team Downed Our Boys With Neatness and Dispatch.

THE VISITORS OUTCLASSED

Rising Distinguished Himself By Two Three-Base Hits in the Forenoon. Second Game Called in the Fifth Inning Because of Rain.

The Our Boys, of Pittsburg, were easily defeated by the East Liverpool team in two games at West End park yesterday. In both games the visitors were only saved from being white-washed by a narrow margin, errors in the first game saving them and the rain in the afternoon allowing them to get their only run.

Barker pitched for the locals in the morning and put up a fine game in the box. In the second inning with two men out Barker missed an easy fly and two runs resulted in that inning from hits that followed. The Pittsburgers again scored in the eighth, but the home team beat them out with a lead of two runs.

Rising distinguished himself at the bat by making two three-base hits. Brucker, who did the pitching for the visiting team, did good work, however, allowing but five hits. His support was not of the best, which proved disastrous.

McNicol retired the side in the seventh inning by making a wonderful stop of a liner at second. Other members of the team made brilliant plays, and though three errors were made, there was never a time in the game that the spectators became uneasy.

Following is the score of the morning game:

E. LIVERPOOL.	R.	H.	P.	A.	E.
McNicol, 2	1	0	3	1	1
Godwin, 3	2	2	2	4	0

Three-base hits—Rising 2. Double play—Davis and Godwin. Struck out—By Barker, 7; by Brucker, 5. Base on balls—Off Barker, 2.

Rain temporarily stopped the afternoon game in the beginning of the fourth inning, but another inning was played after the rain ceased falling.

The diamond was in bad shape and the players were compelled to wade in mud almost ankle deep. Wheatley was in the pitcher's box for the locals and his work was the leading feature of the game. He surprised everybody, especially the Pittsburg players, and up to the fourth inning he had them shut out. With the bases full he gave a man a base on balls, thus forcing in a run. The ball was wet which caused him to become wild for a time. Two of the five hits secured off him were made while the ground was like a sea of mud.

Smallwood, the colored left-handed "star" pitcher, tried his speed curves against the East Liverpools and what they did to him almost broke his heart. He has pitched against the best amateur teams in the country, but never got such a "jarring" as on yesterday afternoon. The first inning was all the locals needed to give the colored twirler a sizing up, and they immediately got after the ball.

In the second inning while the bases were full McNicol sent a three-bagger into far left which none of the fielders got near. Nearly all of the players found Smallwood easy picking, and at the close of the game after being at the bat but four times the East Liverpools had scored 10 hits off the visiting "star."

Both games were interesting and the only thing unpleasant was the rain. It is more than likely if the full nine innings had been played the Pittsburg pitcher would have been knocked clear out of the box. The team is as strong as the average amateur club, but entirely too slow to come fiddling around a team of East Liverpool's class. The score of the afternoon game follows:

E. LIVERPOOL.	R.	H.	P.	A.	E.
Godwin, 3	1	2	2	2	0

The Lemon.

The lemon contains various acids, citric acid among them, with citrate of potash, and these acids oxidize in the blood into carbonates of potash and carbonic acid. As scurvy is believed to be due to a lack of potash salts in the blood, we see how substances like lemons, potatoes and fresh vegetables generally act as preventives of the ailment. Also in rheumatism, in which it is desirable to maintain the alkaline character of the blood, lemons are of service. Beyond this I do not think anybody can vaunt the properties of the fruit. A healthy person has no more need of lemons than of, say, tea, for his ordinary food will supply him with all that is necessary for the maintenance of a sound body. People who talk about lemons as "good for the liver," and so forth, found their belief rather on faith than on knowledge.—London Chronicle.

A BIG REUNION

Held By Members of the Montgomery Family at Rock Springs.

The annual reunion of the Montgomery family was held on the Rock Springs grounds yesterday. This family is among the oldest of this community. They are descendants of James Montgomery, one of the pioneer citizens of Columbiana county, who came here about the beginning of the last century and settled on lands now owned by C. H. Blazer, adjoining Thompson park, that region being then almost a wilderness, except here and there a lonely cabin.

The reunion of yesterday was well attended. Quite a number from a distance were present. Letters from absent friends were read and a very enjoyable time had.

The following officers were elected for the ensuing year: President, C. W. Huston, Calcutta; vice president, John P. Montgomery, Calcutta; secretary, Miss Nannie J. Blazer, East Liverpool; treasurer, C. H. Blazer, East Liverpool; executive committee, John Montgomery, C. W. Huston, Emmett Hickman, Mrs. Sadie Hill, Miss Nannie J. Blazer.

The time and place of the next meeting was left with the executive committee.

TWO FAMOUS RIDERS

STRIKING FEATS OF ENDURANCE IN THE PIONEER DAYS OF THE WEST.

Aubrey's Ride Was the Greatest Physical Achievement Ever Accomplished in This Country—Frontiersman Jim Moore's Hard Ride.

The greatest physical achievement ever accomplished in this country was the ride of F. X. Aubrey from the plaza of Santa Fe, N. M., to the Public square at Independence, Mo., a distance of nearly 800 miles, through a country inhabited by warlike Indians, a large part of which was then a sandy desert. It was about the year 1851 that Aubrey gave his wonderful test of human endurance, before which all other attempts of the kind pale into insignificance. He was a short, heavy set man, 38 years of age, in the prime of manhood and strength. His business for ten years as a Santa Fe trader had made him perfectly familiar with the trail and all the stopping places. He was a perfect horseman, and, although there were great riders in those days, none of them cared to dispute the palm with Aubrey.

On a wager of $1,000 he undertook to ride alone from Santa Fe to Independence inside of six days. It was without a thought of fear that he undertook the terrible feat. It was to be the supreme effort of his life, and he sent half a dozen of the swiftest horses ahead, to be stationed at different points for use in the ride. He left Santa Fe in a sweeping gallop, and that was the pace kept up during nearly every hour of the time until he fell fainting from his foam covered horse in the square at Independence. No man could keep up with the rider, and he would have killed every horse in the west rather than have failed in the undertaking. It took him just 5 days and 19 hours to perform the feat, and it cost the lives of several of his best horses.

After being carried into a room in the old hotel at Independence Aubrey lay for 48 hours in a dead stupor before he came to his senses. He would never have recovered from the shock had it not been for his wonderful constitution. The feat was unanimously regarded by western men as the greatest exhibition of strength and endurance ever known on the plains.

The ride of Jim Moore, a noted frontiersman of the pioneer days, is also worthy of mention. Moore was a man of almost perfect physique. In fact, by military standards he was a model. He weighed 160 pounds, stood 5 feet 10 inches, straight as an arrow, with good neck well set on his shoulders, small waist, but good loins, and had the limbs of a thoroughbred. No finer looking man physically ever rode a broncho than Jim Moore. He could run like an Indian, was as active as a panther, the best natured man in the world, but as courageous as a lion.

In the early sixties Moore was a pony express rider. His route was from Midway station, half way between Fort Kearney and Cottonwood Springs, to Julesburg, a distance of 140 miles. Moore rode the round trip of 280 miles once a week. The stations were from 10 to 14 miles apart, and a fresh horse of Spanish blood was obtained at each station. There was little delay in these changes of horses, as the rider gave the "coyote yell" half a mile away, and, day or night, the station men had the pony ready, so that the rider had only to dismount from one horse and mount the other, and with a dig of the spurs he was on a run again. This ride of 140 miles usually was made in 12 hours. On each route there were two express riders, one going each way. As easy as it may seem to some for a man to bestride fresh horse after horse for 140 miles, there were few men able to stand up to it.

Upon the occasion of which I am to speak Moore's route partner had been ailing, and Moore was anticipating and dreading that he might have to double the route. In this anticipation he realized that there is a time limit to endurance, and therefore he gave the bronchos a little more of the steel than usual and made the trip to Julesburg in 11 hours. Arriving at Julesburg, he had his fears confirmed. His partner was in bed. He had hoped that he might have a few hours for rest, but before he had time to dismount and stretch his cramped and tired muscles the "coyote yell" of the east going rider was heard.

He drank some cold coffee, filled his pocket with cold meat and was in the saddle again for another 140 mile ride. In order to be able to live the route out he sent them for all there was in them, with the result that he arrived at Midway, after having ridden 280 miles, in 22 hours from the time he had left there. Ben Holliday gave him a gold watch and a certificate of his remarkable performance. Many of the old frontiersmen now living knew Moore, knew of his 280 mile ride in 22 hours and have seen the watch and certificate.—Spirit of the Times.

WON TWO GAMES WITH MUCH EASE

East Liverpool Team Downed Our Boys With Neatness and Dispatch.

THE VISITORS OUTCLASSED

Rising Distinguished Himself By Two Three-Base Hits in the Forenoon. Second Game Called in the Fifth Inning Because of Rain.

The Our Boys, of Pittsburg, were easily defeated by the East Liverpool team in two games at West End park yesterday. In both games the visitors were only saved from being white-washed by a narrow margin, errors in the first game saving them and the rain in the afternoon allowing them to get their only run.

Barker pitched for the locals in the morning and put up a fine game in the box. In the second inning with two men out Barker missed an easy fly and two runs resulted in that inning from hits that followed. The Pittsburgers again scored in the eighth, but the home team beat them out with a lead of two runs.

Rising distinguished himself at the bat by making two three-base hits. Brucker, who did the pitching for the visiting team, did good work, however, allowing but five hits. His support was not of the best, which proved disastrous.

McNicol retired the side in the seventh inning by making a wonderful stop of a liner at second. Other members of the team made brilliant plays, and though three errors were made, there was never a time in the game that the spectators became uneasy.

Following is the score of the morning game:

E. LIVERPOOL.	R.	H.	P.	A.	E.
McNicol, 2	1	0	3	1	1

Three-base hits—Rising 2. Double play—Davis and Godwin. Struck out—By Barker, 7; by Brucker, 5. Base on balls—Off Barker, 2.

Rain temporarily stopped the afternoon game in the beginning of the fourth inning, but another inning was played after the rain ceased falling. The diamond was in bad shape and the players were compelled to wade in mud almost ankle deep. Wheatley was in the pitcher's box for the locals and his work was the leading feature of the game. He surprised everybody, especially the Pittsburg players, and up to the fourth inning he had them shut out. With the bases full he gave a man a base on balls, thus forcing in a run. The ball was wet which caused him to become wild for a time. Two of the five hits secured off him were made while the ground was like a sea of mud.

Smallwood, the colored left-handed "star" pitcher, tried his speed curves against the East Liverpools and what they did to him almost broke his heart. He has pitched against the best amateur teams in the country, but never got such a "jarring" as on yesterday afternoon. The first inning was all the locals needed to give the colored twirler a sizing up, and they immediately got after the ball.

In the second inning while the bases were full McNicol sent a three-bagger into far left which none of the fielders got near. Nearly all of the players found Smallwood easy picking, and at the close of the game after being at the bat but four times the East Liverpools had scored 10 hits off the visiting "star."

Both games were interesting and the only thing unpleasant was the rain. It is more than likely if the full nine innings had been played the Pittsburg pitcher would have been knocked clear out of the box. The team is as strong as the average amateur club, but entirely too slow to come fiddling around a team of East Liverpool's class. The score of the afternoon game follows:

E. LIVERPOOL.	R.	H.	P.	A.	E.

Perhaps this incident prevented her from noticing another but more passive one. A group of men standing before the new mill, the same men who had so solicitously challenged her attention with their bows a couple of hours ago, turned as she approached and suddenly dispersed. It was not until this was repeated by another group that its oddity forced itself upon her still angry consciousness. Then the street seemed to be full of those excited, preoccupied groups who melted away as she advanced. Only one man met her curious eyes, the engineer, yet she missed the usual critical smile with which he was wont to greet her, and he gave her a bow of such profound respect and gravity that for the first time she felt really uneasy. Was there something wrong with her hat? That dreadful, fateful hat! Was it too conspicuous? Did he think it was vulgar? She was eager to cross the street on the next block, where there were large plate glass windows which she and Piney—had often used as mirrors. But there was a great crowd on the next block, and it was congregated around the bank—her father's bank. A vague terror, she knew not what, now began to creep over her. She would have turned into a side street, but mingled with her fear was a resolution not to show it, not to even think of it, to combat it as she had the horrid laugh of the Secamp girls, and she kept her way with a beating heart, but erect head, without looking across the street. There was another crowd before the newspaper office, also on the other side, and a bulletin board, but she would not try to read it.

Only one idea was in her mind, to reach her own home before any one should meet her or speak with her. For the last intelligible sound that had reached her was the laugh of the Secamp girls, and this was still ringing in her ears, seeming to voice the hidden strangeness of all she saw and stirring her, as that had, with childish indignation. She kept on with unmoved face, however, and at last turned into the planked side terrace, a part of her father's munificence, and reached the symmetrical garden beds and gravelled walk. She ran up the steps of the veranda and entered the drawing room through the open French window. Glancing around the familiar room, at her father's closed desk, at the open piano, with the piece of music she had been practicing that morning, the whole walk seemed only a foolish dream that had frightened her. She was Cissy Trix, the daughter of the richest man in the town. This was her father's house, the wonder of Canada City.

A ring at the front door bell startled her. Without waiting for the servant to answer it she stepped out on the veranda and saw a boy whom she recognized as a waiter at the hotel kept by Piney's father. He was holding a note in his hand and staring intently at the house and garden. Seeing Cissy, he transferred his stare to her. Snatching the note from him, she tore it open and read in Piney's well known scrawl, "Dad won't let me come to you now, dear, but I'll try to slip out late to-night." Why should she want to come? She had said nothing about coming now, and why should her father prevent her? Cissy crushed the note between her fingers and faced the boy.

"What are you staring at, idiot?" The boy grinned hysterically, a little frightened at Cissy's straightened brows and snapping eyes.

"Get away. There's no answer."

The boy ran off, and Cissy returned to the drawing room. Then it occurred to her that the servant had not answered the bell. She rang again furiously. There was no response. She called down the basement staircase and heard only the echo of her voice in the depths. How still the house was! Were they all out—Susan, Norah, the cook, the Chinaman and the gardener? She ran down into the kitchen. The back door was open, the fires were burning, dishes were upon the table, but the kitchen was empty. Upon the floor lay a damp copy of the "extra." She picked it up quickly. Four black headlines stared her in the face—"Enormous Defalcation!" "Montagu Trix Absconded!" "$500,000 Missing!" "Run on the Bank!"

She threw the paper through the open door as she would have hurled back the accusation from living lips; then in a revulsion of feeling lest any one should find her there she ran up stairs and locked herself in her own room.

So that was what it all meant—all, from the laugh of the Secamp girls to the turning away of the townspeople as she went by! Her father was a thief who had stolen money from the bank and run away, leaving her alone to bear it. No! It was all a lie, a wicked, jealous lie, a foolish lie, for how could he steal money from his own bank? Cissy knew very little of her father. Perhaps that was why she believed in him. She knew still less of business, but she knew what he had done. She had often heard them say it, perhaps the very ones who now called him names. He who had made Canada City what it was! He whom Windbrook said only today had, like Moses, touched the rocks of the Canada with his magic wand of finance, and streams of public credit and prosperity had gushed from it! She would never speak to them again. She would shut herself up here, dismiss all the servants but the Chinaman and wait until her father returned.

There were a knock and the entreating voice of Norah, the cook, outside the door. Cissy unlocked it and flung it open indignantly. "Ah! It's yourself, miss, and I never knew you'd come back till I met that gossamer of a hotel waiter in the street," said the panting servant. "Sure it was only an hour ago while I was at me woorek in the kitchen, and Jim rushes in and sez: 'For the love of God, if I ever see you want to see a blessed cent of the money ye put in the master's bank off wid ye now and draw it out, for there's a run on the bank!'"

"It was an infamous lie!" said Cissy fiercely.

"Sure, miss, how was I to know? And if the master has gone away it's ownly takin me money from the other divils down there that's drawn it out and dividin it betwixt and between them."

Cissy had a very vague idea of what a "run on the bank" meant, but Norah's logic seemed to satisfy her feminine reason. She softened a little.

"Mr. Windbrook is in the parlor, miss, and a jintleman on the veranda," continued Norah, encouraged.

Cissy started. "I'll come down," she said briefly.

Mr. Windbrook was waiting beside the piano, with his soft hat in one hand and a large white handkerchief in the other. He had confidently expected to find Cissy in tears and was ready with boisterous condolence, but was a little taken aback as the young girl entered with a pale face, straightened brows and eyes that shone with audacious rebellion. However, it was too late to change his attitude. "Ah, my young friend," he said a little awkwardly, "we must not give way to our emotions, but try to recognize in our trials the benefits of a great lesson. But," he added, hurriedly, seeing her stand still silent but erect before him, "I see that you do!" He paused, coughed slightly, cast a glance at the veranda—where Cissy now for the first time observed a man standing in an obviously assumed attitude of negligent abstraction—moved toward the back room and in a lower voice said, "A word with you in private."

Without replying Cissy followed him. "If," said Mr. Windbrook, with a sickly smile, "you are questioned regarding your father's affairs, you may remember his peculiar and utterly unsolicited gift of a certain sum toward a new organ, to which I alluded today. You can say that he always expressed great liberality toward the church, and it was no surprise to you."

Cissy only stared at him with dangerous eyes.

"Mrs. Windbrook," continued the reverend gentleman in his highest, heartiest voice, albeit a little hurried,

She opened the drawer rapidly, but noiselessly.

Cissy, with her bright eyes fixed upon her visitor, said, "I shall stay here." "But," said Mr. Windbrook impatiently, "you cannot. That man you see on the veranda is the sheriff's officer. The house and all that it contains are in the hands of the law."

Cissy's face whitened in proportion as her eyes grew darker, but she said stoutly, "I shall stay here till my popper tells me to go."

"Till your popper tells you to go?" repeated Mr. Windbrook harshly, dropping his heartiness and his handkerchief in a burst of unguarded temper. "Your papa is a thief escaping from justice, you foolish girl—a disgraced felon, who dare not show his face again in Canada City—and you are lucky—yes, lucky, miss—if you do not share his disgrace!"

"And you're a wicked, wicked liar!" said Cissy, clenching her little fists at her side and edging toward him with a sidelong, bantamlike movement as she advanced her freckled cheek close to his with an effrontery so like her absconding father that he recoiled before it. "And a mean, double faced hypocrite too! Didn't you always praise him? Didn't you call him a Napoleon and a Moses? Didn't you say he was the making of Canada City? Didn't you get him to raise your salary and start a subscription for your new house? Oh, you—you—beast!"

Here the stranger on the veranda, still gazing abstractedly at the landscape, gave a low and apparently unconscious murmur, as if enraptured with the view. Mr. Windbrook, recalled to an attempt at dignity, took up his hat and handkerchief. "When you have remembered yourself and your position, Miss Trix," he said loftily, "the offer I have made you!"

"I despise it! I'd sooner stay in the woods with the grizzlies and rattlesnakes!" said Cissy pantingly. "Go and leave me alone. Do you hear?" She stamped her little foot. "Are you listening? Go?"

Mr. Windbrook promptly retreated through the door and down the steps into the garden, at which the stranger on the veranda reluctantly tore himself away from the landscape and slowly entered the parlor through the open French window. Here, however, he became equally absorbed and abstracted in the condition of his beard, carefully stroking his shaven cheek and lips and pulling his goatee.

After a pause he turned to the angry Cissy, standing by the piano, radiant with glowing cheeks and flashing eyes, and said slowly: "I reckon you gave the parson as good as he sent. It kinder settles a man to hear the frozen truth about himself sometimes, and you've helped old Shadbelly considerably on the way toward salvation. But he was right about one thing, Miss Trix. The house is in the hands of the law. I'm representing it as deputy sheriff—maybe you might remember me—Jake Poole—when your father was address in the last citizens' meetin, sittin next to him on the platform. I'm in possession. It isn't a job I'm bankerin much arter. I'd as lief rather hunt hos: thieves or track down road agents than this kind of fancy, underhand work. So you'll excuse me, miss, if I ain't got the style."

He paused, rubbed his chin thoughtfully and then said slowly and with great deliberation: "Ef there's any little thing here, miss—any keepsakes or such trifles as you keer for in particular, things you wouldn't like strangers to have—you just make a little pile of 'em and drop 'em down somewhere outside the back door. There ain't no inventory taken or sealin up of anything done just yet, though I have to see there ain't anything disturbed. But I kalklate to walk out on that veranda for a spell and look at the landscape." He paused again and said with a sigh of satisfaction: "It's a mighty poety view out thar. It just takes me every time."

As he turned and walked out through the French window Cissy did not for a moment comprehend him; then, strangely enough, his act of rude courtesy for the first time awakened her to the full sense of the situation. This house—her father's house—was no longer hers! If her father should never return, she wanted nothing from it—nothing! She gripped her beating heart with the little hand she had clinched so valiantly a moment ago. Suddenly her hand dropped. Some one had glided noiselessly into the back room, a figure in a blue blouse—a Chinaman, their house servant, Ah Fe. He cast a furtive glance at the stranger on the veranda and then beckoned to her stealthily. She came toward him wondering, when he suddenly whipped a note from his sleeve and with a dexterous movement slipped it into her fingers. She tore it open. A single glance showed her a small key inclosed in a line of her father's handwriting. Drawing quickly back into the corner, she read as follows: "If this reaches you in time, take from the second drawer of my desk an envelope marked 'Private Contracts' and give it to the bearer." There was neither signature nor address.

Putting her finger to her lip, she cast a quick glance at the absorbed figure on the veranda and stepped before the desk. She fitted the key to the drawer and opened it rapidly, but noiselessly. There lay the envelope and, among other ticketed papers, a small roll of greenbacks, such as her father often kept there. It was his money. She did not scruple to take it with the envelope. Handing the latter to the Chinaman, who made it instantly disappear up his sleeve like a conjurer's act, she signed him to follow her into the hall.

"Who gave you that note, Ah Fe?" she whispered breathlessly.

"Chinaman."

"Who gave it to him?"

"Chinaman."

"And to him?"

"Nollie Chinaman."

"Another Chinaman?"

"Yes, heap Chinaman. Allee same as gang."

"You mean it passed from one Chinaman's hand to another?"

"Allee same."

"Why didn't the first Chinaman who got it bring it here?"

"S'pose Melikan man want to catchee lettel. He spotty Chinaman. He follee Chinaman. Chinaman passee lettel next Chinaman. He no get. Melikan man no hab got. Sabe?"

"Then this package will go back the same way?"

"Allee same."

"And who will you give it to now?"

"Allee same man blingee me lettel. Hop Li, who makee washee."

An idea here struck Cissy which made her heart jump and her cheeks flame. Ah Fe gazed at her with an infantile smile of admiration.

"How far did that letter come?" she asked with eager, questioning eyes.

"Lettee me see him," said Ah Fe.

Cissy handed him the missive. He examined closely some half a dozen Chinese characters that were scrawled along the length of the outer fold and which she had innocently supposed were a part of the markings of the rice paper on which the note was written.

"Heap Chinaman velly much walkee—longee way! S'pose you look." He pointed through the open front door to the prospect beyond. It was a familiar one to Cissy—the long Canada, the crest on crest of serrated plumes and beyond the dim snow line. Ah Fe's brown finger seemed to linger there.

"In the snow," she whispered, her cheek whitening like that dim line, but her eyes sparkling like the sunshine over it.

"Allee same, John," said Ah Fe plaintively.

"Ah Fe," whispered Cissy, "take me with you to Hop Li."

"No good," said Ah Fe stolidly. "Hop Li, he givee this"—he indicated the envelope in his sleeve—"to next Chinaman. He no go. S'pose you go with me, Hop Li. You no makee nothing. Allee same heap foollee!"

"I know, but you just take me there. Do."

The young girl was irresistible. Ah Fe's face relaxed. "All littee!" he said, with a resigned smile.

"You wait here a moment," said Cissy, brightening. She flew up the staircase. In a few minutes she was back again. She had exchanged her smart rose sprigged chintz for a pathetic little blue check frock of her school days. The fateful hat had given way to a brown straw "flat," bent like a frame around her charming face. All the girlishness, and indeed, a certain honest boyishness of her nature, seemed to have come out in her glowing, freckled cheek, brilliant, audacious eyes and the quick stride which brought her to Ah Fe's side.

"Now, let's go," she said, "out the back way and down the side streets." She paused, cast a glance through the drawing room at the contemplative figure of the sheriff's deputy on the veranda and then passed out of the house forever.

SCHLEY'S CHIEF COUNSEL.

Rear Admiral Has Retained One of Washington's Leading Attorneys.

Jeremiah M. Wilson, chief counsel for Admiral Winfield S. Schley before the coming court of inquiry, is one of Washington's leading lawyers. He is also well known in other sections of the eastern United States and enjoys the reputation of being one of the shrewdest of cross examiners. Mr. Wilson has just returned from Europe and is now actively engaged in the preparation of his case.

Although he is now 73 years of age, Admiral Schley's chief counsel is still a man of great intellectual and physical vigor. He does not look his age. He was born in Ohio, but moved to Indiana. From 1860 to 1865 Mr. Wilson was judge of the court of common pleas, and in 1865 he was judge of the circuit court. In 1870 Mr. Wilson was elected to congress and served two terms.

At the expiration of his second term Mr. Wilson was about to return to Indiana to resume his law practice there, but remained instead to engage in practice in connection with Judge Shellabarger. The partnership has been very successful, and the firm is one of the best known in Washington. They have been engaged in many of the most important cases, civil and criminal, that have been tried in the District of Columbia. It is in the latter branch of his profession that Mr. Wilson excels, but he nevertheless frequently appears before the United States supreme court. He is expected to put to good use in his present case his experiences in the celebrated court martial of D. G. Swaim, judge advocate general of the army.

Besides his law practice ex-Judge Wilson has extensive business interests in the city of his adoption. He is president of the Chesapeake and Potomac Telephone company. Rear Admiral Schley and he are close personal friends, and it is known that the former had his selection as chief counsel in mind ever since the court of inquiry was suggested.

Wagner and the Player.

When Richard Wagner was conductor of the Royal Opera in Dresden, the orchestra of that institution, though one of the best in Germany, was far from being as good as it is now, and Wagner had a good deal of trouble in making it follow his intentions. Some years later, when he was living as an exile in Zurich, he undertook to train the local orchestra. After a few attempts he exclaimed, "Gentlemen, you have just given me a great pleasure; you have played exactly as badly as the Dresden orchestra."

The Zurich players laughed, and the idea that they might play better than the royal musicians in Dresden so fired their zeal that they actually succeeded in doing it.

NORDICA HONORED.

American Soprano to Sing in a Famous New European Theater.

A great honor is that paid to Mme. Lillian Nordica, America's famous soprano singer. Mme. Nordica has been selected to sing in September at the new Wagner theater in Munich, one of the centers of European music, the splendid role of Isolde in the master's opera, "Tristan and Isolde." The fact that Mme. Nordica made this performance will be inscribed on a tablet in the new theater, which is a splendid edifice and an exact replica of the world famed Baireuth Festspielhaus.

Mme. Nordica has often been called by critics the first of American singers. She was born in Maine in 1859 and studied in Boston and in Europe. A famous music teacher of Milan called her "Giglio Nordica" ("Lily of the North"), whereupon she adopted Nordica as a stage name. In private life Mme. Nordica is known as Mme. Zoltan Doeme. Next season Mme. Nordica will not, according to her usual custom, appear in grand opera. She is to make an extended tour of the United States, singing in a series of recitals. Her season in the new Munich theater is to last four weeks.

Bottlers' Day, Oct. 18.

Bottling of popular beverages has come to be an extensive and thriving industry. There are numerous large establishments in this country, giving employment to many thousands of persons. Several important associations have been formed among the employers and employees. It has been decided to have this year a gathering of those connected with the industry. This will be at the Pan-American Exposition on Oct. 18. The great attraction of the New World's Fair will serve to make the gathering a large one.

Different From the Rest.

They are talking about how they happened to marry.

"I married my wife," said one after the others had all had their say, "because she was so different from any woman I had ever met."

"How was that?" chorused the others.

"She was the only woman I ever met who would have me."

The name "Chase," twice made famous, is a shining mark for the unscrupulous to pounce upon and appropriate in order to foist upon the public their worthless preparations. These birds of prey, by using the name Chase, expect the public to be fooled into believing they are the medicines of Dr. A. W. They play upon the name Chase, but dare not use the initials "A. W."

They imitate, but dare not counterfeit the portrait and signature of Dr. A. W. Chase, which identifies the Nerve Pills now recognized as infallible for building up pale, weak, thin-blooded, nerve exhausted sufferers.

Perhaps this incident prevented her from noticing another but more passive one. A group of men standing before the new mill, the same men who had so solitiously challenged her attention with their bows a couple of hours ago, turned as she approached and suddenly dispersed. It was not until this was repeated by another group that its oddity forced itself upon her still angry consciousness. Then the street seemed to be full of those excited, preoccupied groups who melted away as she advanced. Only one man met her curious eyes, the engineer, yet she missed the usual critical smile with which he was wont to greet her, and he gave her a bow of such profound respect and gravity that for the first time she felt really uneasy. Was there something wrong with her hat? That dreadful, fateful hat! Was it too conspicuous? Did he think it was vulgar? She was eager to cross the street on the next block, where there were large plate glass windows which she and Pincy—if Pincy were only with her now!—had often used as mirrors. But there was a great crowd on the next block, and it was congregated around the bank—her father's bank. A vague terror, she knew not what, now began to creep over her. She would have turned into a side street, but mingled with her fear was a resolution not to show it, not to even think of it, to combat it as she had the horrid laugh of the Secamp girls, and she kept her way with a beating heart, but erect head, without looking across the street. There was another crowd before the newspaper office, also on the other side, and a bulletin board, but she would not try to read it.

Only one idea was in her mind, to reach her own home before any one should meet her or speak with her. For the last intelligible sound that had reached her was the laugh of the Secamp girls, and this was still ringing in her ears, seeming to voice the hidden strangeness of all she saw and stirring her, as that had, with childish indignation. She kept on with unmoved face, however, and at last turned into the planked side terrace, a part of her father's munificence, and reached the symmetrical garden beds and gravelled walk. She ran up the steps of the veranda and entered the drawing room through the open French window. Glimping around the familiar room, at her father's closed desk, at the open piano, with the piece of music she had been practicing that morning, the whole walk seemed only a foolish dream that had frightened her. She was Cissy Trix, the daughter of the richest man in the town. This was her father's house, the wonder of Canada City.

A ring at the front door bell startled her. Without waiting for the servant to answer it she stepped out on the veranda and saw a boy whom she recognized as a waiter at the hotel kept by Pincy's father. He was holding a note in his hand and staring intently at the house and garden. Seeing Cissy, he transferred his stare to her. Snatching the note from him, she tore it open and read in Pincy's well known scrawl, "Don't want to come to you now, dear, but I'll try to slip out late tonight." Why should she want to come? She had said nothing about coming now, and why should her father prevent her? Cissy crushed the note between her fingers and faced the boy.

"What are you staring at, idiot?" The boy grinned hysterically, a little frightened at Cissy's straightened brows and snapping eyes.

"Get away. There's no answer." The boy ran off, and Cissy returned to the drawing room. Then it occurred to her that the servant had not answered the bell. She rang again furiously. There was no response. She called down the basement staircase and heard only the echo of her voice in the depths. How still the house was! Were they all out—Susan, Norah, the cook, the Chinaman and the gardener? She ran down into the kitchen. The back door was open, the fires were burning, dishes were upon the table, but the kitchen was empty. Upon the floor lay a damp copy of the "extra." She picked it up quickly. Four black headlines stared her in the face—"Enormous Defalcation!" "Montagu Trix Absconded!" "500,000 Missing!" "Run on the Bank!"

She threw the paper through the open door as she would have hurled back the accusation from living lips; then in a revision of feeling lest any one should find her there she ran up stairs and locked herself in her own room.

So that was what it all meant—all, from the laugh of the Secamp girls to the turning away of the townspeople as she went by! Her father was a thief who had stolen money from the bank and run away, leaving her alone to bear it. No! It was all a lie, a wicked, jealous lie, a foolish lie, for how could he steal money from his own bank? Cissy knew very little of her father. Perhaps that was why she believed in him. She knew still less of business, but she knew what he had done. She had often heard them say it, perhaps the very ones who now called him names. He who had made Canada City what it was! He whom Windbrook said only today had, like Moses, touched the rocks of finance, and streams of public credit and prosperity had gushed from it! She would never speak to them again. She would shut herself up here, dismiss all the servants but the Chinaman and wait until her father returned.

There were a knock and the entreaty voice of Norah, the cook, outside the door. Cissy unlocked it and flung it open indignantly.

"Ah! It's yourself, miss, and I never knew you'd come back till I met that gossip of a hotel waiter in the street," said the panting servant. "Sure it was only an hour ago while I was at me woorek in the kitchen, and Jim rushes in and sez: 'For the love of God, if I ever ye want to see a blessed cint of the money ye put in the master's bank off wid ye now and draw it out, for there's a run on the bank!'"

"It was an infamous lie!" said Cissy fiercely.

"Sure, miss, how was I to know? And if the master has gone away it's only takin me money from the other devils down there that's drawin it out and dividin it betwixt and between them."

Cissy had a very vague idea of what a "run on the bank" meant, but Norah's logic seemed to satisfy her feminine reason. She softened a little.

"Mr. Windbrook is in the parlor, miss, and a jentleman on the veranda," continued Norah, encouraged.

Cissy started. "I'll come down," she said briefly.

Mr. Windbrook was waiting beside the piano, with his soft hat in one hand and a large white handkerchief in the other. He had confidently expected to find Cissy in tears and was ready with boisterous condolence, but was a little taken aback as the young girl entered with a pale face, straightened brows and eyes that shone with audacious rebellion. However, it was too late to change his attitude. "Ah, my young friend," he said a little awkwardly, "we must not give way to our emotions, but try to recognize in our trials the benefits of a great lesson. But," he added, hurriedly, seeing her stand still silent but erect before him, "I see that you do!" He paused, coughed slightly, cast a glance at the veranda—where Cissy now for the first time observed a man standing in an obviously assumed attitude of negligent abstraction—moved toward the back room and in a lower voice said, "A word with you in private."

Cissy only stared at him with dangerous eyes.

"Mrs. Windbrook," continued the reverend gentleman in his highest, heartiest voice, albeit a little hurried,

She opened the drawer rapidly, but noiselessly.

Cissy, with her bright eyes fixed upon her visitor, said, "I shall stay here."

"But," said Mr. Windbrook impatiently, "you cannot. That man you see on the veranda is the sheriff's officer. The house and all that it contains are in the hands of the law."

Cissy's face whitened in proportion as her eyes grew darker, but she said stoutly, "I shall stay here till my popper tells me to go."

"Till your popper tells you to go?" repeated Mr. Windbrook harshly, dropping his heartiness and his handkerchief in a burst of unguarded temper. "Your papa is a thief escaping from justice, your foolish girl—a disgraced felon, who dare not show his face again in Canada City—and you are lucky—yes, lucky, miss—if you do not share his disgrace!"

"And you're a wicked, wicked liar!" said Cissy, clenching her little fists at her side and edging toward him with a sidelong, bantamlike movement as she advanced her freckled cheek close to his with an effrontery so like her abounding father that he recoiled before it. "And a mean, double faced hypocrite too! Didn't you always praise him? Didn't you call him a Napoleon and a—Moses? Didn't you say he was 'the making of Canada City'? Didn't you get him to raise your salary and

Here the stranger on the veranda, still gazing abstractedly at the landscape, gave a low and apparently unconscious murmur, as if enraptured with the view. Mr. Windbrook, recalled to an attempt at dignity, took up his hat and handkerchief. "When you have remembered yourself and your position, Miss Trix," he said loftily, "the offer I have made you—"

"I despise it! I'd sooner stay in the woods with the grizzlies and rattlesnakes!" said Cissy pantingly. "Go and leave me alone. Do you hear?" She stamped her little foot. "Are you listening? Go!"

Mr. Windbrook promptly retreated through the door and down the steps into the garden, at which the stranger on the veranda reluctantly tore himself away from the landscape and slowly entered the parlor through the open French window. Here, however, he became equally absorbed and abstracted in the condition of his beard, carefully stroking his shaven cheek and lips and pulling his goatee.

After a pause he turned to the angry Cissy, standing by the piano, radiant with glowing cheeks and flashing eyes, and said slowly: "I reckon you gave the parson as good as he sent. It kinder settles a man to hear the frozen truth about himself sometimes, and you've helped old Shadbelly considerably on the way toward salvation. But he was right about one thing, Miss Trix. The house is in the hands of the law. I'm representing it as deputy sheriff—maybe you might remember me—Jake Poole—when your father was address in the last citizens' meetin, sittin next to him on the platform. I'm in possession. It isn't a job I'm hankerin much arter. I'd as lief rather hunt hos: thieves or track down road agents than this kind of fancy, underhand work. So you'll excuse me, miss, if I ain't got the style."

He paused, rubbed his chin thoughtfully and then said slowly and with great deliberation: "Ef there's any little thing here, miss—any keepsakes or such trifles as you keer for in particular, things you wouldn't like strangers to have—you just make a little pile of 'em and drop 'em down somewhere outside the back door. There ain't no inventory taken or sealin up of anything done just yet, though I have to see there ain't anything disturbed. But I kalkilate to walk out on that veranda for a spell and look at the landscape." He paused again and said with a sigh of satisfaction: "It's a mighty poety view out thar. It just takes me every time."

As he turned and walked out through the French window Cissy did not for a moment comprehend him; then, strangely enough, his act of rude courtesy for the first time awakened her to the full sense of the situation. This house—her father's house—was no longer hers! If her father should never return, she wanted nothing from it—nothing! She gripped her beating heart with the little hand she had clinched so valiantly a moment ago. Suddenly her hand dropped. Some one had glided noiselessly into the back room, a figure in a blue blouse—a Chinaman, their house servant, Ah Fe. He cast a furtive glance at the stranger on the veranda and then beckoned to her stealthily. She came toward him wondering, when he suddenly whipped a note from his sleeve and with a dexterous movement slipped it into her fingers. She tore it open. A single glance showed her a small key inclosed in a line of her father's handwriting. Drawing quickly back into the corner, she read as follows: "If this reaches you in time, take from the second drawer of my desk an envelope marked 'Private Contracts' and give it to the bearer." There was neither signature nor address.

Putting her finger to her lip, she cast a quick glance at the absorbed figure on the veranda and stepped before the desk. She fitted the key to the drawer and opened it rapidly, but noiselessly. There lay the envelope and, among other ticketed papers, a small roll of greenbacks, such as her father often kept there. It was his money. She did not scruple to take it with the envelope. Handing the latter to the Chinaman, who made it instantly disappear up his sleeve like a conjurer's act, she signed him to follow her into the hall.

"Who gave you that note, Ah Fe?" she whispered breathlessly.

"Chinaman."

"Who gave it to him?"

"Chinaman."

"And to him?"

"Nollee Chinaman."

"Another Chinaman?"

"Yes, heap Chinaman. Allee same as gang."

"You mean it passed from one Chinaman's hand to another?"

"Allee same."

"Why didn't the first Chinaman who got it bring it here?"

"S'pose Melikan man want to catchee lettel. He spotty Chinaman. He follee Chinaman. Chinaman passee lettel next Chinaman. He no get. Melikan man no hab got. Sabe?"

"Then this package will go back the same way?"

"Allee same."

"And who will you give it to now?"

"Allee same man blingee me lettel. Hop Li, who makee washee."

An idea here struck Cissy which made her heart jump and her cheeks flame. Ah Fe gazed at her with an infantile smile of admiration.

"How far did that letter come?" she asked with eager, questioning eyes.

"Lettee me see him," said Ah Fe.

Cissy handed him the missive. He examined closely some half a dozen Chinese characters that were scrawled along the length of the outer fold and which she had innocently supposed were a part of the markings of the rice paper on which the note was written.

"Heap Chinaman velly much walkee—longue way! S'pose you look," he pointed through the open front door to the prospect beyond. It was a familiar one to Cissy—the long Canada, the crest on crest of serrated pines and beyond the dim snow line. Ah Fe's brown finger seemed to linger there.

"In the snow," she whispered, her cheek whitening like that dim line, but her eyes sparkling like the sunshine over it.

"Allee same, John," said Ah Fe plaintively.

"Ah Fe," whispered Cissy, "take me with you to Hop Li."

"No good," said Ah Fe stolidly. "Hop Li, he givee this"—he indicated the envelope in his sleeve—"to next Chinaman. He no go. S'pose you go with me, Hop Li. You no makee nothing. Allee same heap foollee!"

"I know, but you just take me there. Do."

The young girl was irresistible. Ah Fe's face relaxed. "All right," he said, with a resigned smile.

"You wait here a moment," said Cissy, brightening. She flew up the staircase. In a few minutes she was back again. She had exchanged her smart rose sprigged chintz for a pathetic little blue check frock of her school days. The fateful hat had given way to a brown straw "flat," bent like a frame around her charming face. All the girlishness, and, indeed, a certain honest boyishness of her nature, seemed to have come out in her glowing, freckled cheek, brilliant, audacious eyes and the quick stride which brought her to Ah Fe's side.

"Now, let's go," she said, "out the back way and down the side streets." She paused, cast a glance through the drawing room at the contemplative figure of the sheriff's deputy on the veranda and then passed out of the house forever.

SCHLEY'S CHIEF COUNSEL.

Rear Admiral Has Retained One of Washington's Leading Attorneys.

Jeremiah M. Wilson, chief counsel for Admiral Winfield S. Schley before the coming court of inquiry, is one of Washington's leading lawyers. He is also well known in other sections of the eastern United States and enjoys the reputation of being one of the shrewdest of cross examiners. Mr. Wilson has just returned from Europe and is now actively engaged in the preparation of his case.

Although he is now 73 years of age, Admiral Schley's chief counsel is still a man of great intellectual and physical vigor. He does not look his age. He was born in Ohio, but moved to Indiana. From 1830 to 1865, Mr. Wilson was judge of the court of common pleas, and in 1865 he was judge of the circuit court. In 1870 Mr. Wilson was elected to congress and served two terms.

At the expiration of his second term Mr. Wilson was about to return to Indiana to resume his law practice there, but remained instead to engage in practice in connection with Judge Sheliabarger. The partnership has been very successful, and the firm is one of the best known in Washington. They have been engaged in many of the most important cases, civil and criminal, that have been tried in the District of Columbia. It is in the latter branch of his profession that Mr. Wilson excels, but he nevertheless frequently appears before the United States supreme court. He is expected to put to good use in his present case his experiences in the celebrated court martial of D. G. Swaim, judge advocate general of the army.

Besides his law practice ex-Judge Wilson has extensive business interests in the city of his adoption. He is president of the Chesapeake and Potomac Telephone company. Rear Admiral Schley and he are close personal friends, and it is known that the former had his selection as chief counsel in mind ever since the court of inquiry was suggested.

Wagner and the Player.

When Richard Wagner was conductor of the Royal Opera in Dresden, the orchestra of that institution, though one of the best in Germany, was far from being as good as it is now, and Wagner had a good deal of trouble in making it follow his intentions. Some years later, when he was living as an exile in Zurich, he undertook to train the local orchestra. After a few attempts he exclaimed, "Gentlemen, you have just given me a great pleasure; you have played exactly as badly as the Dresden orchestra."

The Zurich players laughed, and the idea that they might play better than the royal musicians in Dresden so fired their zeal that they actually succeeded in doing it.

NORDICA HONORED.

American Soprano to Sing in a Famous New European Theater.

A great honor is that paid to Mme. Lillian Nordica, America's famous soprano singer. Mme. Nordica has been selected to sing in September at the new Wagner theater in Munich, one of the centers of European music, the splendid role of Isolde in the master's opera, "Tristan und Isolde." The fact that Mme. Nordica made this performance will be inscribed on a tablet in the new theater, which is a splendid edifice and an exact replica of the world famed Baireuth Festspielhaus.

Mme. Nordica has often been called by critics the first of American singers. She was born in Maine in 1859 and studied in Boston and in Europe. A famous music teacher of Milan called her "Giglio Nordica" ("Lily of the North"), whereupon she adopted Nordica as a stage name. In private life Mme. Nordica is known as Mme. Zoltan Doeme. Next season Mme. Nordica will not, according to her usual custom, appear in grand opera. She is to make an extended tour of the United States, singing in a series of recitals. Her season in the new Munich theater is to last four weeks.

Bottlers' Day, Oct. 18.

Bottling of popular beverages has come to be an extensive and thriving industry. There are numerous large establishments in this country, giving employment to many thousands of persons. Several important associations have been formed among the employers and employees. It has been decided to have this year a gathering of those connected with the industry. This will be at the Pan-American Exposition on Oct. 18. The great attraction of the New World's Fair will serve to make the gathering a large one.

Different From the Rest.

They are talking about how they happened to marry.

"How was that?" chorused the others.

"She was the only woman I ever met who would love me."

They play upon the name Chase, but dare not use the initials "A. W."

ABUSED BY A MOB.

Innocent Negro Was Chased by Strikers and Friends, at Pittsburg.

FINALLY RESCUED BY POLICE.

A Lieutenant, While Trying Alone to Protect the Man, Was Hit With a
Cinder—He Summoned a Squad of
Police Officers.

Pittsburg, Sept. 3.—William Jones, a negro, of 923 Wyllie avenue, was brutally treated by an enormous crowd of strikers in Liberty avenue near Fourteenth street. The affair occurred late yesterday afternoon. Jones went to the Star mills with a letter addressed to his cousin, whom he supposed was at work there. When he found that his cousin was not in the mill he started away. While passing along Twelfth street, near the mill, Jones was stopped by the pickets of the strikers, who demanded to know his business in the mill. Jones refused to tell and grew surly. The threats of the strikers finally frightened him and he made a wild rush from his tormentors.

Mob Followed Negro.

Up Twelfth street toward Liberty he ran and cut Liberty street, closely pursued by the strikers. Every moment this crowd increased in size. Among the throng were women, who were especially bitter. The negro sped on. He became terror-stricken and when near Thirteenth street darted blindly across the street and up into the yards of the Pennsylvania railroad. Lieutenant Crossman, of the Central police station, happened to be coming along on a car at this time and seeing the negro running and the crowd after him, he got between the crowd and the negro and finally overhauled Jones, who fell to the ground unable to move.

The crowd hurled cinders and whatever they could lay their hands on at the crouching man, who was struck frequently and one of the flying missiles found its way to Lieutenant Crossman's head, he being struck in the back of the neck, and while not seriously injured, was incensed at the unreasonableness of the people, and called for police aid.

The lieutenant finally took Jones to Engine company 15 in Penn avenue, where fully 1,000 people congregated and shouted and swore at the unfortunate man. A patrol wagon with a reserve force of officers was hastily summoned and the police and firemen succeeded in keeping the crowd back until Jones could be placed in the wagon and sent to No. 3 police station. At the station Jones told his story in a simple manner, and after he had been given time to rest and get his wind he was sent home in a roundabout way.

Taken Home in Patrol.

The crowd which chased Jones broke up as soon as the victim was loaded in the patrol wagon.

The officials of the Star mills have taken additional steps for protection in the future. Yesterday the force of city police guarding the mill was increased from three men in the day time to eight men.

Another aggressive move was made against the mills about 5:30 o'clock. At that hour a delivery wagon arrived near the mill with a load of provisions. The strikers halted the driver and requested that he turn around and go away without leaving the provisions. After an argument the driver did as requested and did not again return to the plant.

Pittsburg, Sept. 3.—Efforts to start the demiller tin mill may be made this week. It is said a large gang of non-union men will come down from Monessen to aid in starting the plant. The McKeesport police have been advised of the effort to start the mill and prepare accordingly.

ATTEMPTED ASSAULT ON CHILD.

Farmer Captures Tramp—Marched Him Home For Identification.

Weeping Water, Neb., Sept. 3.—Saturday afternoon a tramp attempted to criminally assault the 6-year-old daughter of Walter Perry, living four miles west of town. A little brother, 4 years old, called his mother, who ran from the house to a straw rack, where the tramp had the girl, and frightened him away.

Monday morning the father, Walter Perry, found a tramp answering the description of the one who committed the assault, hiding in the quarry here and compelled him at the point of a revolver to return home with him for identification. He gave the name of Lingell, is white and was 35 years old. There are threats of summary vengeance if he shall be identified.

CONCERNING TRUSTS.

Will the People Prefer Promise or Performance?

RECORD OF THE TWO PARTIES

In Dealing With the Huge Latter-Day Combinations of Capital—The Republicans Did All That They Had Power to Do—Sherman Anti-Trust Law.

Promise or performance, which will the people prefer in dealing with trust combinations? The Ohio Democratic platform demands "The suppression of all trusts and a return to industrial freedom," whatever that last may mean. It sounds very much like free trade, and looks like free trade, and the very next clause in the Democratic platform confirms the free trade view by saying that "as a means to that end (i. e., industrial freedom) all trust products should be placed on the free list." That is to say, free trade is the only possible suggestion after all its study, that the embodied wisdom of the Ohio Democracy has to offer for the evils it magnifies. This is characteristic as well as correct, for in four years of full political power, from 1893 to 1896, both president and congress, the Democrats did nothing against the trusts. Not one official act against the trusts by either the executive or the legislative departments is placed to the credit of the Democratic party in power in all those four years, save the sugar trust schedule of the Wilson progressive free trade bill, by which $4,000,000 was turned over from the people to that trust.

And yet at that very time, the Democratic congress had the best chance in the world to do something worth while in this matter. John Sherman, that great Republican, was author of the law which has been used effectively against trade combinations. In its three years of operation, the test of the courts had shown where it might be bettered, but the Democrats did not one of these things in all their four years of power.

It was a Republican president, Benjamin Harrison, who suggested such legislation in his message of December 3, 1889. It was John Sherman, the Republican leader, who framed the necessary bill. It was a Republican congress controlled by that party in both senate and house, that enacted this measure; and it was President Harrison who signed it July 3, 1890. This was actual results in Republican legislation, as contrasted with the doing nothing policy of the Democrats in their four years of power in both the executive and legislative departments. The Sherman law has proved to be, and today constitutes, the only practical federal legislation on the subject of trusts, monopolies and combinations of capital. It has been tested in the courts by a number of suits brought in the name of the United States, and prosecuted with greater or less success, according to the merits of each case, but proving the statute strong enough to make trouble for the trusts wherever the testimony would warrant a conviction.

Experience has since demonstrated the need for more radical action because of the inherent weakness of the fundamental law, largely because of the decision of the United States Supreme court given by Chief Justice Fuller (himself in politics a Democrat) that the congress, except in interstate commerce, is without constitutional power to repress or regulate the trusts. To meet this difficulty, the Republicans in congress submitted and proposed a constitutional amendment giving to congress the power to fine, regulate, prohibit, or dissolve, trusts, monopolies, or combinations, whether existing in the form of a corporation or otherwise. This was voted upon in the house June 1, 1900, and failed to receive the constitutional two-thirds vote, because the Democrats opposed it. Of 154 votes in its favor, all were by the Republicans but four; of 132 votes against it, all were by Democrats and Populists but two.

Here was something practical and practicable, and the Democrats did nothing for it, opposed it in fact. In place of it all they have to offer after all these four years of discussion is barely and simply bald free trade. In order to destroy the possible evils that may have grown up in connection with our industries, the democratic remedy is to destroy the industries themselves, create idleness for employees, and universal panic among the people.

This is not ancient history nor old things that we are talking about, but the Ohio Democratic platform for the present year; the ideals of Democracy brought down to date. Every Democratic vote is not a vote against trusts under this plank of their platform, so much as it is a vote for free trade.

What a contrast there is between the clamor kept up by the Democrats upon the stump and in their press upon the trust question, and the absolute absence of any achievement by them as a party, either in legislative or administrative action upon the evils over which they raise such a disturbance. It has been well said that "when it is out of power, the Democratic party is against trusts; when it is in power it is in favor of them."

It is a favorite Democratic pretense that the trusts have some mysterious connection with the Republican policy of protection of American industries, and consequently in the inherent opposition of the Democrats, as a party, to those industries, the Ohio Democratic platform of 1901 naturally names as its only suggested remedy for the possible evils of trade combinations, absolute free trade for any articles that may be supposed to be trust products. The utter fallacy of this is found in multiplied facts. One is that the oldest and largest industrial monopoly within the United States, the Standard Oil company, has operated all the time under free trade in its product and has grown and flourished without any protective tariff to help it along in the way that the Democrats talk about. The other is that in England and other European countries there are, and have long been, colossal and flourishing trade combinations, monopolies of entire products, just what are called trusts on this side of the Atlantic, and yet they exist and flourish under free trade tariff.

In view of such conditions actually existing and upon the most extensive scale, how utterly deceptive is the only Democratic remedy. If the framers of the Ohio Democratic platform know the facts, they will play false to the people in pretending to offer free trade as a remedy. If they do not know the teaching of all history, then they are unfit to offer any remedy whatever, and no suggestion from them is worthy of a moment's consideration. No one would insult their ability by imputing ignorance to the leaders of the Ohio Democracy, and yet we are loth to accuse them of willful deception of the people of this state. Nevertheless they are free traders anyhow, always were such before the trust question came up, and their use of the anti-trust feeling among the people to promote their friendship for a full free list of articles of American manufacture to the detriment of the American industries, must be kept account of in considering this question.

No one has ever seriously denied that there have been possible evils in trade combinations, and that greater difficulties may follow from them unless they shall be suitably restrained in behalf of the general welfare; but that is certainly not a reason for opening the floodgates of free trade to swamp everything. This is a problem that requires the wisest statesmanship, and is not to be settled by political harangues or platforms, and the people will have no patience with a party that can see nothing in it but an advantage for itself.

STANDS IN THE WAY.

No radical reform of Ohio's taxation system can ever be completed under the state constitution as it has stood for 50 years. Only by amending that, so that the state can be separated from the counties and municipalities in its raising of revenues, can any reform get a fair start. The legislature can act, if the grip upon its powers by the constitution, which now ties the general assembly hand and foot, can be released. That brings the power back to the people, or as close to them as is possible. The Republicans have repeatedly tried to bring this about. The Democrats have done nothing. Will that party keep up its do-nothing policy?

RECIPROCITY.

The Democrats knocked reciprocity out of the laws, where it was put by the Republicans, and never has any Democratic congress or president done anything to make that method for American trade extension effective in the least. How false, then, is any friendship for reciprocity that the Democrats may profess, now that the day of its assured success is at hand. Entrust it only to the Republican party, by which it was first advocated and enacted. Risk reciprocity only with its original advocates and unfailing friends, not with the Democracy who repealed it when it was in the statutes.

Quiet, faithful, efficient, economical, without any fuss about things, but with every duty done every time, Governor Nash's administration has been like the man himself. As his friends knew him, his state now knows him as equal to every occasion, sure to do the right thing in the right way at the right time. Ohio will be true to herself, by being true to such a governor.

The Foraker act for free trade with Porto Rico as soon as that island should have the local revenues to pay its local expenses, is now in full force under President McKinley's proclamation, just as congress promised and directed. That is the Republican style exactly; make sure of every step and take it in due time exactly as agreed.

When he wrote the reciprocity sections of his tariff law, McKinley proved himself the true friend of that method for trade expansion. When the Democrats repealed that enactment, they proved themselves its enemy. Best keep in power the people proved by their acts to be the friends of reciprocity.

ABUSED BY A MOB.

Innocent Negro Was Chased by Strikers and Friends, at Pittsburg.

FINALLY RESCUED BY POLICE.

A Lieutenant, While Trying Alone to Protect the Man, Was Hit With a
Cinder—He Summoned a Squad of
Police Officers.

Pittsburg, Sept. 3.—William Jones, a negro, of 923 Wyllie avenue, was brutally treated by an enormous crowd of strikers in Liberty avenue, near Fourteenth street. The affair occurred late yesterday afternoon. Jones went to the Star mills with a letter addressed to his cousin, whom he supposed was at work there. When he found that his cousin was not in the mill he started away. While passing along Twelfth street, near the mill, Jones was stopped by the pickets of the strikers, who demanded to know his business in the mill. Jones refused to tell and grew surly. The threats of the strikers finally frightened him and he made a wild rush from his tormentors.

Mob Followed Negro.

Up Twelfth street toward Liberty he ran and cut Liberty street, closely pursued by the strikers. Every moment this crowd increased in size. Among the throng were women, who were especially bitter. The negro sped on. He became terror-stricken and when near Thirteenth street darted blindly across the street and up into the yards of the Pennsylvania railroad. Lieutenant Crossman, of the Central police station, happened to be coming along on a car at this time and seeing the negro running and the crowd after him, he got between the crowd and the negro and finally overhauled Jones, who fell to the ground unable to move.

The crowd hurled cinders and whatever they could lay their hands on at the crouching man, who was struck frequently and one of the flying missiles found its way to Lieutenant Crossman's head, he being struck in the back of the neck, and while not seriously injured, was incensed at the unreasonableness of the people, and called for police aid.

The lieutenant finally took Jones to Engine company 15 in Penn avenue, where fully 1,000 people congregated and shouted and swore at the unfortunate man. A patrol wagon with a reserve force of officers was hastily summoned and the police and firemen succeeded in keeping the crowd back until Jones could be placed in the wagon and sent to No. 3 police station. At the station Jones told his story in a simple manner, and after he had been given time to rest, and get his wind he was sent home in a roundabout way.

Taken Home in Patrol.

The crowd which chased Jones broke up as soon as the victim was loaded in the patrol wagon.

The officials of the Star mills have taken additional steps for protection in the future. Yesterday the force of city police guarding the mill was increased from three men in the day time to eight men.

Another aggressive move was made against the mills about 5:30 o'clock. At that hour a delivery wagon arrived near the mill with a load of provisions. The strikers halted the driver and requested that he turn around and go away without leaving the provisions. After an argument the driver did as requested and did not again return to the plant.

Pittsburg, Sept. 3.—Efforts to start the Demmler tin mill may be made this week. It is said a large gang of non-union men will come down from Monessen to aid in starting the plant. The McKeesport police have been advised of the effort to start the mill and prepare accordingly.

ATTEMPTED ASSAULT ON CHILD.

Farmer Captures Tramp—Marched Him Home For Identification.

Weeping Water, Neb., Sept. 3.—Saturday afternoon a tramp attempted to criminally assault the 6-year-old daughter of Walter Perry, living four miles west of town. A little brother, 4 years old, called his mother, who ran from the house to a straw rack, where the tramp hal the girl, and frightened him away.

Monday morning the father, Walter Perry, found a tramp answering the description of the one who committed the assault, hiding in the quarry here and compelled him at the point of a revolver to return home with him for identification. He gave the name of Lingell, is white and was 35 years old. There are threats of summary vengeance if he shall be identified.

WOMAN'S SAD JOURNEY.

St. Paul, Sept. 3.—Mrs. P. T. Downs, wife of Assistant General Superintendent Downs, of the Great Northern, who was killed in the accident in Montana, on Friday, and mother of Kirk Downs, who also was killed, arrived in this city and immediately left for the west.

The party will meet the remains at Glasgow, Mont., and return east with them immediately. The funeral will be held at Washington, D. C.

The body of Kirk Downs, the son of the dead superintendent, cannot be found, most likely having been consumed in the flames.

CONCERNING TRUSTS.

Will the People Prefer Promise or Performance?

RECORD OF THE TWO PARTIES

In Dealing With the Huge Latter-Day Combinations of Capital—The Republicans Did All That They Had Power to Do—Sherman Anti-Trust Law.

Promise or performance, which will the people prefer in dealing with trust combinations? The Ohio Democratic platform demands "The suppression of all trusts and a return to industrial freedom," whatever that last may mean. It sounds very much like free trade, and looks like free trade, and the very next clause in the Democratic platform confirms the free trade view by saying that "as a means to that end (i. e., industrial freedom) all trust products should be placed on the free list." That is to say, free trade is the only possible suggestion after all its study, that the embodied wisdom of the Ohio Democracy has to offer for the evils it magnifies. This is characteristic as well as correct, for in four years of full political power, from 1893 to 1896, both president and congress, the Democrats did nothing against the trusts. Not one official act against the trusts by either the executive or the legislative departments is placed to the credit of the Democratic party in power in all those four years. save the sugar trust schedule of the Wilson progressive free trade bill, by which $4,000,000 was turned over from the people to that trust.

And yet at that very time, the Democratic congress had the best chance in the world to do something worth while in this matter. John Sherman, that great Republican, was author of the law which has been used effectively against trade combinations. In its three years of operation, the test of the courts had shown where it might be bettered, but the Democrats did not one of these things in all their four years of power.

It was a Republican president, Benjamin Harrison, who suggested such legislation in his message of December 3, 1889. It was John Sherman, the Republican leader, who framed the necessary bill. It was a Republican congress controlled by that party in both senate and house, that enacted this measure; and it was President Harrison who signed it July 3, 1890. This was actual results in Republican legislation, as contrasted with the do-nothing policy of the Democrats in their four years of power in both the executive and legislative departments. The Sherman law has proved to be, and today constitutes, the only practical federal legislation on the subject of trusts, monopolies and combinations of capital. It has been tested in the courts by a number of suits brought in the name of the United States, and prosecuted with greater or less success, according to the merits of each case, but proving the statute strong enough to make trouble for the trusts wherever the testimony would warrant a conviction.

Experience has since demonstrated the need for more radical action because of the inherent weakness of the fundamental law, largely because of the decision of the United States Supreme court given by Chief Justice Fuller (himself in politics a Democrat) that the congress, except in interstate commerce, is without constitutional power to repress or regulate the trusts. To meet this difficulty, the Republicans in congress submitted and proposed a constitutional amendment giving to congress the power to fine, regulate, prohibit, or dissolve, trusts, monopolies, or combinations, whether existing in the form of a corporation or otherwise. This was voted upon in the house June 1, 1900, and failed to receive the constitutional two-thirds vote, because the Democrats opposed it. Of 154 votes in its favor, all were by the Republicans but four; of 132 votes against it, all were by Democrats and Populists but two.

nothing for it, opposed it in fact. In place of it all they have to offer after all these four years of discussion is barely and simply bald free trade. In order to destroy the possible evils that may have grown up in connection with our industries, the democratic remedy is to destroy the industries themselves, create idleness for employes, and universal panic among the people.

This is not ancient history nor old things that we are talking about, but the Ohio Democratic platform for the present year; the ideals of Democracy brought down to date. Every Democratic vote is not a vote against trusts under this plank of their platform, so much as it is a vote for free trade.

It has been well said that "when it is out of power, the Democratic party is against trusts; when it is in power it is in favor of them."

KNOCKED SENSELESS

WELLSVILLE BOARDING HOUSE KEEPER ATTACKED.

Brass Knuckles Said to Have Been Used By His Assailant.

Harry Phillips, proprietor of a Wellsville boarding house, where, it is said, non-union mill men are boarding, was attacked in front of Bradley's barber shop in Wellsville at about 2 o'clock this afternoon.

A man thought to be an Irondale striker struck Phillips with brass knuckles and knocked him senseless. A physician was called and with difficulty revived the man. A bad gash was cut in his head.

The police are looking for Phillips' assailant.

MILL MEN DEPART

A Number of Wellsville Men Get Work in Pittsburgh.

Twenty of the striking mill men left Wellsville for Pittsburgh today, where they have secured employment at the Anchor mills. Captain Patrick O'Connor was among the number.

Wellsville people in great number were at the depot at noon when the men left. They were given an ovation when they boarded the train.

John O. Bates, a Steubenville contractor, was in Wellsville today in search of laborers. He is building a pike road near Empire and is giving striking mill men the preference among those who he is hiring.

The report that a non-union man was mobbed this morning is untrue. One of the men was stopped by a few strikers, but not attacked.

Several of the Irondale strikers came to Wellsville this morning and also some Lisbon men. Organizer Geo. D. Evans came, but left on the noon train for Pittsburgh. He will return tomorrow. While at Pittsburgh Mr. Evans will confer with leading attorneys as to the validity of the Irondale injunction.

PROPOSE TO FIGHT IT

By Advice of Attorneys Strikers Say They Will Ignore Injunction.

Irondale, Sept. 3.—(Special)—President Chadwick, of the Amalgamated Association, went to Pittsburgh today, to consult the association attorney in regard to the injunction. The strikers are said to have legal advice to the effect that the injunction is invalid and propose to fight it. They say they will ignore it here. Many non-iron workers are in the list.

KNIFE USED

In a Cutting Affray in Which a Kensington Man Was Badly Used Up.

John Forbes, of Kensington, who was in the city yesterday, was badly used up in a fight last night, at the corner of Sixth and Franklin streets. An unknown man attacked Forbes with a knife.

The man was badly cut in the arm and also had one of his fingers almost severed.

Many Cars Off.

Numerous street cars on the Wellsville line got off the track yesterday. On account of the slippery rails cars 5 and 34 collided in the West End and the vestibules of both were smashed. Nobody was injured.

CHLOROFORM USED

AND PEOPLE SLEEPING IN A TENT ROBBED.

Bold Thieves Got Away With $60 From Dry Run Campers.

The tent occupied by Louis DeBee, who has been camping at Dry Run for several months, was entered early yesterday morning by thieves and $60 in money taken.

Upon awakening in the morning Mr. DeBee had a severe headache and the tent was full of a sweet smelling stuff which he thinks was chloroform. A small son of Mr. DeBee, who arises at 5 o'clock, did not awake until 10 o'clock it being impossible to arouse him.

The thieves also entered the tent of George Wise, next to DeBee's, and were making their escape with a pair of trousers belonging to J. Miller, a guest of the Wise family, and in which was a pocketbook containing $112, when Mrs. Wise was awakened and they dropped the trousers and made their escape. There is no clue.

FAST TIME PROMISED.

Elevated Road to Run Trains Two Hundred Miles an Hour.

A new elevated road for New York, from Harlem to University place, over which trains are to be run at a speed of 200 miles an hour is promised by Osborne Congleton, president of the American Elevated railroad. Mr. Congleton said to a New York World reporter:

"We shall run our trains at the rate of 200 miles an hour. Our system embodies all that is perfect in railroad travel. We shall construct electric elevated roads with a double central rail track and an additional inverted rail under each end of the ties which will serve as conductors and also to balance and bind the cars upon the track."

"At a meeting we acted favorably upon the charter of the Metropolitan Transit company, inscribed upon the New York statute books as chapter 833 of the laws of 1872. This charter provides for the building of an elevated railroad through Church street to Canal street and thence by purchase of the right of way for a three track road through the blocks on the west side of the city to the Harlem river, with the right to construct two bridges over said river; also for an underground road for passenger and freight service from Canal street under the elevated structure to connect with the New York Central railroad at Sixtieth street. The court of appeals confirmed the right to construct."

TO GROW HARD WHEAT.

New Varieties to Be Planted in Western Texas.

Professor Mark Alfred Carleton, cereal expert of the United States department of agriculture, was here on his way to points in the semiarid region of west Texas, where he goes to arrange for a series of experiments in the growing of hard, or macaroni, wheat, says an Austin dispatch to the St. Louis Globe-Democrat. He says that he has made several trips to Russia and has visited Turkistan, Algiers and Argentina in the interest of the department and collected in those countries 80 new varieties of hard wheat. The department has altogether 150 new varieties of hard wheat, and it is the intention of Secretary Wilson to have these planted throughout the plains of the west.

Professor Carleton says it is believed that the planting of these seeds will extend to the one hundredth meridian and will within a few years increase the wheat production of the United States at least 80,000,000 bushels. Hard wheat is in great demand for the macaroni manufacturers of Europe and this country.

A NOVEL EXPERIMENT.

Effect of Food Upon Children to Be Studied.

Children of wealthy parents are to be the subjects of food experiments by scientists in a splendidly equipped home known as the Chicago Hospital School For Nervous and Delicate Children, says a Chicago dispatch to the New York Times. Only the well to do can afford to send their children to the school.

The home can accommodate only 15 children and has more applications than it can fill at the present time. An annex is to be established soon, and the effects of food on the brain and body are to be studied under the direction of Dr. John M. Dodson when he returns to Chicago from Boston, where he is understood to be conducting further researches in the subject.

All conventional ideas of a school are to be disregarded at the hospital school. There will be no desks, and nothing to suggest an institution will be allowed. The idea of working out such a problem originated with Dr. John M. Dodson, dean of Rush Medical college. The hospital school is affiliated with Rush college.

WOUNDED PROTECTING GIRL.

Her Lover Drew Revolver and Afterward Tried to Suicide.

Walpole, Mass., Sept. 3.—Two men were shot and seriously wounded here as the outcome of a quarrel between Fred L. Jenks, a machinist, and Myra Belle Spear, a young woman with whom he had been keeping company. Jenks thought that Miss Spear did not care for him as much as formerly and by way of emphasizing a protest he threatened to shoot her.

Charles Malers, of Norwood, saw the infuriated man point a revolver at the girl, and when he grappled with the latter shot him in the body. The bullet entering four inches below the heart. Jenks then shot himself near the heart. He is not expected to live, but there is a slight chance that his victim will recover. Jenks is 30 years old and a veteran of the Spanish war.

RUMOR OF SUICIDE DENIED.

Man Found Breathing His Last—Bullet Hole in Breast.

Rome, N. Y., Sept. 3.—Robert M. Wilson, formerly owner of the R. M. Wilson bath tub works in this city, was shot and almost instantly killed by a revolver in his own hand at his summer home at Sylvan Beach. Mr. Wilson had been sitting on the porch with his wife and three children. He had been gone a few minutes when Mrs. Wilson was startled by the report of a discharge of a firearm and she went into the house, and there on floor lay her husband, breathing his last, with a bullet hole in his breast. Rumors of suicide are denied. It is said that Mr. Wilson told a friend recently that he carried $250,000 on his life. Coroner Hubbard, of this city, is making an investigation.

Irontale, Sept. 3.—(Special)—President Chadwick of the Amalgamated Association, went to Pittsburg today, to consult the association attorney in regard to the injunction. The strikers are said to have legal advice to the effect that the injunction is invalid and propose to fight it. They say they will ignore it here. Many non-iron workers are in the list.

AND PEOPLE SLEEPING IN A TENT ROBBED.

Bold Thieves Got Away With $60 From Dry Run Campers.

The tent occupied by Louis DeBee, who has been camping at Dry Run for several months, was entered early yesterday morning by thieves and $60 in money taken.

Upon awakening in the morning Mr. DeBee had a severe headache and the tent was full of a sweet smelling stuff which he thinks was chloroform. A small son of Mr. DeBee, who arises at 5 o'clock, did not awake until 10 o'clock it being impossible to arouse him.

The thieves also entered the tent of George Wise, next to DeBee's, and were making their escape with a pair of trousers belonging to J. Miller, a guest of the Wise family, and in which was a pocketbook containing $112, when Mrs. Wise was awakened and they dropped the trousers and made their escape. There is no clue.

VOLNEY B. CUSHING TONIGHT.

FAST TIME PROMISED.

Elevated Road to Run Trains Two Hundred Miles an Hour.

A new elevated road for New York, from Harlem to University place, over which trains are to be run at a speed of 200 miles an hour is promised by Osborne Congleton, president of the American Elevated railroad. Mr. Congleton said to a New York World reporter:

"We shall run our trains at the rate of 200 miles an hour. Our system embodies all that is perfect in railroad travel. We shall construct electric elevated roads with a double central rail track and an additional inverted rail under each end of the ties which will serve as conductors and also to balance and bind the cars upon the track."

"At a meeting we acted favorably upon the charter of the Metropolitan Transit company, inscribed upon the New York statute books as chapter 833 of the laws of 1872. This charter provides for the building of an elevated railroad through Church street to Canal street and thence by purchase of the right of way for a three track road through the blocks on the west side of the city to the Harlem river, with the right to construct two bridges over said river; also for an underground road for passenger and freight service from Canal street under the elevated structure to connect with the New York Central railroad at Sixtieth street. The court of appeals confirmed the right to construct."

TO GROW HARD WHEAT.

New Varieties to Be Planted in Western Texas.

Professor Mark Alfred Carleton, cereal expert of the United States department of agriculture, was here on his way to points in the semiarid region of west Texas, where he goes to arrange for a series of experiments in the growing of hard, or macaroni, wheat, says an Austin dispatch to the St. Louis Globe-Democrat. He says that he has made several trips to Russia and has visited Turkistan, Algiers and Argentina in the interest of the department and collected in those countries 80 new varieties of hard wheat. The department has altogether 150 new varieties of hard wheat, and it is the intention of Secretary Wilson to have these planted throughout the plains of the west.

Professor Carleton says it is believed that the planting of these seeds will extend to the one hundredth meridian and will within a few years increase the wheat production of the United States at least 80,000,000 bushels. Hard wheat is in great demand for the macaroni manufacturing of Europe and this country.

A NOVEL EXPERIMENT.

Effect of Food Upon Children to Be Studied.

Children of wealthy parents are to be the subjects of food experiments by scientists in a splendidly equipped home known as the Chicago Hospital School For Nervous and Delicate Children, says a Chicago dispatch to the New York Times. Only the well to do can afford to send their children to the school.

The home can accommodate only 15 children and has more applications than it can fill at the present time. An annex is to be established soon, and the effects of food on the brain and body are to be studied under the direction of Dr. John M. Dodson when he returns to Chicago from Boston, where he is understood to be conducting further researches in the subject. All conventional ideas of a school are to be disregarded at the hospital school. There will be no desks, and nothing to suggest an institution will be allowed. The idea of working out such a problem originated with Dr. John M. Dodson, dean of Rush Medical college. The hospital school is affiliated with Rush college.

WOUNDED PROTECTING GIRL.

Her Lover Drew Revolver and Afterward Tried to Suicide.

Walpole, Mass., Sept. 3.—Two men were shot and seriously wounded here as the outcome of a quarrel between Fred L. Jenks, a machinist, and Myra Belle Spear, a young woman with whom he had been keeping company. Jenks thought that Miss Spear did not care for him as much as formerly and by way of emphasizing a protest he threatened to shoot her.

Charles Maters, of Norwood, saw the infuriated man point a revolver at the girl, and when he grappled with the latter shot him in the body, the bullet entering four inches below the heart. Jenks then shot himself near the heart. He is not expected to live, but there is a slight chance that his victim will recover. Jenks is 30 years old and a veteran of the Spanish war.

Wilson bath tub works in this city, was shot and almost instantly killed by a revolver in his own hand at his summer home at Sylvan Beach. Mr. Wilson had been sitting on the porch with his wife and three children. He had been gone a few minutes when Mrs. Wilson was startled by the report of a discharge of a firearm and she went into the house, and there on floor lay her husband, breathing his last, with a bullet hole in his breast. Rumors of suicide are denied. It is said that Mr. Wilson told a friend recently that he carried $250,000 on his life. Coroner Hubbard, of this city, is making an investigation.
